California Based Company, Ruiz Foods, Adds Plant in Florence

A large jovial crowd celebrated the ground-breaking at the new Ruiz Foods Inc. plant in Florence on July 15. The California-based company is investing some $55 million in an East Coast facility, and Florence officials turned out in droves to welcome them. As part of the celebration, Ruiz served samples of its El Monterey® and Tostitos® brand foods.

El Monterey® is the Number 1-selling frozen Mexican food in the United States, and Tostitos® is one of the leading roller grill products in the U.S.

Combined annual sales for 2013 were $600 million. Not only did the company purchase the former Heinz plant just off I-95, but officials also broke ground for a distribution warehouse expansion. Production lines are scheduled to be up and running in mid-2015.

Several family members of Ruiz Foods (pronounced "reece"), including founder Fred Ruiz and his daughter, Kim Ruiz Beck, had great things to say about Florence. They plan to staff the new site with local people, from the management team on down to production workers.

When Fred Ruiz joined his father in business 50 years ago, he had no idea that their dream of producing quality Mexican food would grow into the largest brand in the country. "We are proud to celebrate our 50th birthday with an expansion on the East Coast," he said. "We have no idea what our potential is from here."

Although the senior Ruiz is planning to retire this year, the company remains in the family. He referred to his son Matt as "a rising star," and his daughter Kim is the chairman of the company. They employ 2,400 team members across the country.

Gov. Nikki Haley called the selection of Florence "a perfect fit," and she promised that South Carolina would be there to support them in any way possible. "Your company so much reflects this community--your values and your work ethic. We will wrap our arms around you", she said.

100 Years of Extension

In our fast-paced and ever-changing world, we are geared to looking forward, not back. But every modern achievement is built on the past. Exactly 100 years ago, Clemson Extension Service came into being through the Smith-Lever Act, and we are proud that South Carolina is where this enormously valuable service started.

Every county in our state has benefited from Extension Service. From 4-H to the latest in agricultural practices, consulting to testing, advice to hands-on help, Extension agents have been the backbone of many farms in our state.

Like me, most farm kids grew up showing dairy or beef cows, raising sheep, or keeping flocks of chickens as 4-H projects. They learned valuable skills not only about raising and handling livestock, but in keeping records. Many a farmer wouldn't be in business today if not for the lessons he—or she—learned from 4-H and Extension classes. Of course, my favorite part of it was getting out of school to go to a fair.

Any time we had a problem on the farm, we knew we could call on our County Extension Agent. Way back when, Dave Howe would come and study our situation, then go back and do some research for us. Often he could answer our questions on the spot, but we knew we could always count on him for help.

Good county agents seem like members of the family. They get to know crops, kids, and who were the best cooks in town and what time they ate lunch. They never failed to be courteous and genuinely concerned about our welfare. Many of them served for decades, dedicating their lives to helping farmers.

Commissioner's School Winners

The SC Commissioner's School for Agriculture gives high school students an inside look at various college majors and related career options in agriculture and natural resources. This year 37 juniors and seniors took part in academic projects, field tours and laboratory exercises at Clemson University from July 19-25. Finalists of the discussion meet, which assessed the students' ability to discuss important agricultural topics, are (from left) Blair Horton, Rielly Craver, Taylor Cordavano, Abbee Carnes, Leigh Fleming, and Brooke Feder. Brooke was the overall winner of the competition.

Extension Homemakers taught classes in everything from sewing and quilting to canning and preserving foods, cooking, setting up budgets, and almost any skill a homemaker needed to keep her family running smoothly. Blanche would tell you that I probably should have taken some of those classes. If any homemaker ever had a question or a problem, she could call the Orangeburg office for a quick answer—or even get a home visit.

Now for some Extension history: it was the Smith-Lever Act of 1914 that created Cooperative Extension Service, defined as “a state-by-state national network of educators who extend university-based knowledge to the people.”

South Carolina was an early leader. In fact, the “Clemson Model” of Extension became the basis for the Smith-Lever Act, authored by Georgia Senator Michael Hoke Smith and South Carolina Representative A. Frank Lever.

Lever, a Clemson Life Trustee, was devoted to the needs of agriculture and farming interests. Born in 1875 in Lexington County, he graduated from Newberry College, then received his bachelor of laws from Georgetown University in 1899. In 1901, he was elected to the U.S. Congress. He chaired the House Agriculture Committee from 1910-1919, served as a member of the Federal Farm Board, and organized the First Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank.

Lever and Senator E.D. “Cotton Ed” Smith co-authored the Cotton Futures Act. Lever also helped formulate the Federal Farm Loan act of 1916, which was the forerunner of the Farm Credit Administration.

He is best remembered for the Smith-Lever Act of 1914, which established Extension services at state agricultural colleges to aid the farmer with new techniques of farming. The Smith-Lever Act helped transform the face of agriculture from 19th century modes to more modern and scientific 20th century methods of farming.

Cooperative Extension was designed as a partnership of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the land-grant universities to give “useful and practical information on subjects relating to agriculture, home economics, and rural energy” and to impart information through demonstrations, publications, and otherwise. It has certainly met those expectations.

We hope Extension will be around for another 100 years!

Ruiz Foods Inc.

Other local officials included Sen. Hugh Leatherman, Mayor Pro Tem Buddy Brand, and Florence County Council Chairman James Schofield. All of them stated that the Ruiz family are “our kind of people.”

CEO Rachel Cullen said that demand for their food is growing. “El Monterey is the Number 1 brand of Mexican frozen food in the country, which is the reason we need to increase our capacity.” She thanked the locals for their support.

After an official groundbreaking for the expansion, the family invited the crowd to sample their products, which included El Monterey® burritos, taquitos, tamales, and two flavors of Tornados®. The guests raved about the quality of the food.

Asked about the potential for using South Carolina produce, executive vice president David Auchterlonie replied, “That’s one of the reasons we chose this location. We will be looking to source local foods.”

As a token of their commitment to Florence, the Ruiz family presented a check for $10,000 to McLeod's Children's Hospital. The company will initially employ 300 people, with up to 500 new jobs being created as they add distribution lines.

Forestry Commission Taking Orders for Seedlings

The South Carolina Forestry Commission is now taking orders for seedlings for the winter planting season.

The complete catalog and a printable order form can be found online at <http://trees.sc.gov/nur.htm>. The new edition features enhanced product descriptions and new artwork depicting seasonal appearances in drawings by Texas artist Robert O'Brien.

Additionally, Seedling Price Guides with quick-order forms are available at most SC Forestry Commission offices statewide.

From the mountains to the coast, landowners and forestry professionals will be happy to learn that their Forestry Commission now has its fastest-growing loblolly pine seedlings in containers for improved survival and early growth after planting. This stock has been developed specifically for South Carolina's regional climates and soils. Customers can order with confidence as they have our agency foresters on hand to assist them in their forestland management goals.

For the 2014-2015 planting season, 17 softwood and 14 hardwood and other plant selections are available. Seven of these products are now available in containers.

Seedling orders can be placed by mail: S.C. Forestry Commission, P.O. Box 21707, Columbia, SC 29221 or fax: 803-275-5227

Seedlings can be delivered via UPS or be picked up at Taylor Nursery, 53 Girl Scout Camp Rd., Trenton. For more information, call Taylor Nursery at 803-275-3578.

The South Carolina Forestry Commission has been providing healthy and dependable tree seedlings since 1928 and takes great pride in its role in establishing the valuable forest resource our state has today. Landowners who plant seedlings from the Forestry Commission are part of an industry which supports 90,000 jobs in South Carolina and impacts our state economy by $17 billion annually.

New Ideas for Fresh Peaches

Fresh peaches are available at the State Farmers Markets and at SC Certified roadside stands all across the state. Local peach growers also have an abundance of fruit this year.

The SC Peach Council would like to encourage people to explore more ways to preserve our state fruit, and to use it year round. Many consumers already can and freeze peaches, so here is one other easy (and short) recipe to pique interest in this luscious fruit. Visit www.scp Peach.org to see more great recipes.

Peach Honey

8 cups juice from fresh SC Grown peaches

4 cups sugar

Cover fresh peaches with water and cook slowly in a covered saucepot until soft. Then put in a cheesecloth bag and press to remove all juice. Drip the juice through a jelly bag and measure. Place in a saucepan and heat. When it boils vigorously, add sugar at the rate of half as much sugar as juice. Boil rapidly until the consistency of honey. Pour into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims and adjust lids. Allow to process in a boiling water bath for 30-35 minutes.
