When you visit the State Fair, check out the many agricultural displays, similar to this one, in the Cantey Building. The SC Department of Agriculture will have staff on hand every day during the hours that the building is open. There's always something new at the fair.

Hugh E. Weathers
Commissioner

State Fair Brings Back Memories

The State Fair starts next week, and there's nothing like it. It's a place to let go and spend some fun time with family and friends and enjoy everything from exciting rides on the Midway to nationally popular entertainment, to the dozens upon dozens of terrific exhibits. From racing pigs to some pretty intricate sand sculptures, the fair has something for everyone.

And, as always, the South Carolina Department of Agriculture will be there along with other agricultural exhibitors. Our department spends a lot of time and energy in the Cantey Building, making sure the public can get the latest information on agriculture from crops to cooking demonstrations. Be sure to come visit us where you'll find department staff on hand to answer your questions and show you how agriculture affects everyone each day.

Of course, the Weathers are partial to the livestock and poultry barns. Those blue ribbons hanging on the cages and the booths are the result of a lot of hard work. The preparation starts many months before the fair.

I have to admit the cattle barn is my favorite, since it brings back many memories

Go Pink at This Year's SC State Fair

The theme of this year's S.C. State Fair is "Seeds of Hope," a campaign designed to raise awareness about breast cancer. To further emphasize the message, the fair is partnering with three medical centers—Palmetto Health, Lexington Medical Center, and Providence Hospitals—to "go pink."

Since pink is the color associated with breast cancer awareness, the fair is featuring a large pink and white tent, "virtually overflowing with help, hope, and optimism," said State Fair General Manager Gary Goodman. "Surrounded by the rides, music, and fun at the fair, the pink tent will be a convenient, welcoming space to pick up resources and chat with health care professionals."

To celebrate the millions of people who have survived breast cancer, the fair will feature evenings backlit in pink light, as well as a variety of events and educational activities. Workers will distribute more than 100,000 packets of pink forget-me-not seeds to kick off its campaign.

In addition, the fair is the presenting sponsor for the 24th annual Walk for Life/Race for Life on Oct. 18. After the walk, anyone wearing a pink event shirt will be admitted to the fair for free Saturday, Oct. 18 and Sunday, Oct. 19.

The SC Department of Agriculture is supporting the "Seeds of Hope" message by having its staff wear pink shirts. "We always have a big presence in the Cantey Building, not just with our commodity boards, but with an ag information booth, cooking demonstrations, specialty food vendors, and agricultural displays. All our folks will be wearing pink," said SC Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers.

Among the department's most popular events at the fair are the cooking demonstrations. Well-known local chefs will take the stage every day at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Chefs from the newly launched Chef Ambassador Program are being invited to participate. ## Area Locations Set for Pesticide Disposal

The SC Department of Agriculture has established four locations where South Carolina homeowners, farmers, foresters, nurserymen, golf course operators, and custom applicators can safely dispose of old or unwanted pesticides.

Pesticides include insecticides, herbicides, nematocides, fungicides and other similar products used in commercial agricultural production. No fertilizers, household chemicals, compressed cylinders or empty containers will be accepted. Disposal is free. Collection times at each site are 9 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Oct. 13, Anderson County
Southern States Cooperative
4010 South Murray Ave, Anderson

Oct. 15, Orangeburg County

Commercial applicators can bring up to 2,500 pounds of solid waste and up to 300 gallons of liquid pesticides at no charge. However, if they bring more than that amount, they need to notify SDCA and will have to pay for the overage.

For more information, contact SCDA's John Stokes at 803.737.9696 or jstokes@scda.sc.gov or Pat Grogan with ECOFLO Inc., the company handling the disposal, at 336.617.2707 or pgrogan@ecoflo.com.

State Fair Brings Back Memories

of our family hauling cattle to the fair, so my brother Marty and I could show them. We spent some sleep-deprived nights getting our animals washed, clipped, and groomed to perfection. Most times we'd have to wash them again early in the morning, then brush them endlessly while waiting our turn in the ring. I'll go and watch the show now and wonder 'Was I ever that small leading a full-grown Holstein around the show ring?'. The process of showing livestock is a family activity, and it taught us many valuable lessons.

I still get a kick out of watching the younger 4-H'ers with their animals. Sometimes you wonder who's leading who! The 4-H'ers are handling cattle, sheep, goats, pigs, and horses, and they're doing it with style and determination. No matter what the outcome, you have to give them an "A" for their efforts. After all, these are our future farmers. We try to go watch our Farmers Market manager Brad Boozer's two sons compete nowadays.

Blanche and I always visit the poultry barn to view the dozens of breeds of chickens, ducks, geese, pheasants, turkeys, and other feathered creatures. I have to admit they look a little more groomed than the three we have at home in the coop.

And then there's the fair food! Corn dogs, candy apples, sloppy subs piled high with peppers and onions, candy apples, cotton candy, and fried everything—there's something to satisfy every taste bud. With so many tasty items available, the hardest part each year is narrowing down which ones to try. I have to say though that my favorite is the foot-long corndogs slathered with mustard and lots of salty French fries drowned in vinegar.

I hope you enjoy all of the events, activities, and food that the State Fair has planned for this year. Don't forget to stop by the Cantey Building and learn something about you might not know about South Carolina agriculture. Meet our department staff -look for the pink shirts! Hope to see you there!

EIA Case in Aiken Reminds Horse Owners to Keep Testing

A mule that tested positive for Equine Infectious Anemia (EIA) in Aiken is no longer a threat to any other horses in the state, according to Clemson Livestock Poultry Health veterinarian Dr. Adam Eichelberger.

The disease is transmitted only through the transfer of blood from one infected horse to another. Primary vectors, or modes of transmission, are biting flies, (horse flies and deer flies), used hypodermic needles, and blood transfusions. Mosquitoes do not transmit EIA.

Horse flies and deer flies are the primary carriers of EIA, but their range is limited. "Research shows that 200 yards is a safe distance for quarantine," Dr. Eichelberger continued. "We have contacted all horse owners that we were concerned about potential EIA transmission. Their horses are currently being monitored for any signs of the disease."

Like HIV in humans, EIA is not transmitted through casual contact. Following the state EIA laws and regulations about testing your horse and knowing the history of new horses will minimize the risk of possible exposure to an infected animal.

The test for Equine Infectious Anemia is commonly referred to as the Coggins test, named after veterinarian Dr. Leroy Coggins, who developed the test. In South Carolina, horses are required to have a current negative Coggins within the past 12 months to gather at public assemblies, including trail rides, horse shows, and boarding stables, and to cross state lines.

The state veterinarian's office recommends having a negative Coggins when there is a change in ownership.

"This positive case serves as a reminder to South Carolina horse owners why it's important to have horses tested," Eichelberger said. He urged horse owners to follow the laws that were implemented to protect our horse industry and to have proper preventative care done as recommended by your veterinarian.

This year the state has had only seven cases of EEE, down from 49 last year, and has not had any cases of West Nile Virus, down from three last year. Eichelberger attributes the decrease in mosquito-borne diseases to a cooler winter last year and increased disease awareness, which resulted in an increased number of animals being vaccinated. For a complete list of recommended vaccinations, go to www.clemson.edu/public/lph/ahp/equine.html.

The SC Department of Agriculture supports the current regulations, which serve the overall interest of the horse industry.
