South Carolina Department of Agriculture Unveils New Website & New Logo

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture is pleased to announce the unveil of its newly redesigned website, agriculture.sc.gov. The new site is easy-to-navigate and users will have quicker access to pages, calendar events, and forms.

The website is designed to help consumers, producers, and other agencies find answers to questions in a quick and effective manner. The website provides visitors with accurate search functionality with more information in an organized and welcoming presentation. Users of the site can subscribe to the South Carolina Market Bulletin, fill out consumer protection forms, and find Certified South Carolina Grown products all within a few clicks of the mouse.

Please visit www.agriculture.sc.gov, and let us know what you think!

We are currently in transition with our Market Bulletin on our new website. You may not see your ad(s) in our current publication, but we are continuing to make improvements and maintain the high level of service you are used to. We value your comments and feedback. Thank you for your patience!

Touring Moore Farms Is Special Treat

Moore Farms Botanical Gardens is easily one of the most beautiful private gardens in the state. Started 13 years ago when business-woman Darla Moore moved from New York back to her grandparents' farm near Lake City, the 55 acres show a tremendous diversity. From sections using native wildflowers and indigenous shrubs to formal gardens with carefully planned views, every aspect of the garden brings delight to the lucky viewer.

The entrance includes a whimsical stumpery and beautiful drive through many different fields circling around the swimming pond, while the exit is a lovely allee of crepe myrtles. Standing as a sentinel over the property is an authentic fire tower that was disassembled, moved, and re-erected. Near the entrance is the well-appointed Fire Tower Center, which is used for classes, events, workshops, and group lectures.

Several themed gardens offer a profusion of flowers, shrubs, native grasses, and indigenous trees in carefully planned and meticulously executed designs. One area flows seamlessly into another, with plenty of benches and unique seating for strollers to sit and enjoy the views.

The formal garden, surrounded by tall clipped hedges, is a work of art in itself. Laid out with wide grassy walkways and a central fountain, it includes unusual specimen plants as well as more familiar favorites.

Comfortable seating invites guests to sit and enjoy the tranquil scenery.

The State of Agriculture in S.C.

The only constant in life is change, and that certainly applies to agriculture. Our industry is seeing unprecedented changes, and they are moving at tremendous speed.

What does this mean for South Carolina? Agribusiness, which consists of agriculture and forestry, has been recognized as our state's largest industry with an economic impact of $34 billion. The question to ask is where agriculture is headed in the future.

Technology and information are two of the biggest influences in agriculture today. For example, the latest farming equipment boasts GPS technology that allows a farmer, like my nephew, Landrum, to harvest his crop within a 16th of an inch on the row he planted. That accuracy was unheard of just a few years ago. Equipment is bigger and more efficient, with 16-row planters and harvesters saving time in the fields. That saves on the inputs, as well as makes agriculture more sustainable economically and environmentally.

The biggest impact this year is the pressure that has been placed on commodity prices due to the laws of supply and demand – higher yields and lower worldwide demands. Another impact is the new farm bill, which has changed the way producers are provided safety nets for yield loss.

S.C. Forestry Commission Selling Tree Seedlings for Fall

The South Carolina Forestry Commission is encouraging land owners to place their orders for tree seedlings as soon as possible for the fall planting season.

South Carolina buyers have exclusive access to the full catalog of Forestry Commission seedlings grown and sold at Taylor Nursery in Edgefield County. Offerings include more than 50 bare-root and containerized varieties of trees, shrubs, and grasses, including 17 selections of pine, 14 oaks, and other popular native trees such as bald cypress, red cedar, Atlantic white cedar, palmetto, and numerous other hardwood species.

"It's important that landowners act now to make their selections because planting season for bare-root seedlings generally begins in December," said Tim Adams, SCFC Resource Development Director. "We also want to highlight our containerized longleaf species and our third-generation loblolly, available in both containerized and bare-root varieties."

The purpose of the Forestry Commission's seedling program is to provide a superior and wide-ranging selection of genetically improved products to land owners for everything from timber and Christmas tree production, wildlife plantings and windbreaks, to streamside buffers and wetland mitigation.

Seedling orders can be shipped via United Parcel Service or picked up at Taylor Nursery in Edgefield County. For more information visit <http://www.state.sc.us/forest/nur.htm> or call Taylor Nursery at 803-275-3578.

STAX, Farm Bill Workshop Set for Nov. 18

Cotton farmers are encouraged to attend one of the educational meetings the National Cotton Council has scheduled to provide its members with in-depth information regarding insurance options for cotton under the Agricultural Act of 2014.

The meeting will provide an in-depth look at the new Stacked Income Protection Plan (STAX) and the Supplemental Coverage Option. Coverage levels, expected yields, and premium rates will be covered in detail in order to better equip producers with the information necessary to evaluate the insurance options for 2015. An update on overall farm bill implementation and a question and answer session will be included.

The South Carolina meeting will be held on Nov. 18, beginning at 9 a.m., at the Family Development Center, 210 Brooks Boulevard, in Santee. It is co-hosted by the South Carolina Cotton Board, SC Farm Bureau, Southeastern Cotton Ginners, and Southern Cotton Growers.

Innovative Collaboration Grows Crops & Produces Bio-fuel

Two Midlands bio-fuel companies are collaborating to grow bio-crops and to sell liquid bio-fuels across the state. ATP-SC and Midlands Biofuels are working together to produce clean energy and decrease the state's reliance on imported fuels.

Founded by Joe James, ATP-SC is developing a pilot torrefaction plant in Allendale, which will convert plant and wood material ("biomass") into a variety of bio-products. Torrefaction is a carbonization process which makes the properties of the biomass more comparable to coal. The biomass is then made into pellets or briquettes which are sold to end users. ATP-SC's $3.65 million pilot plant will produce roughly 13,000 tons of torrefied material per year.

Midlands Biofuels of Winnsboro, owned by Joe Renwick, converts waste cooking oil into clean biodiesel fuel. Biodiesel is a renewable fuel that can be used in any diesel engine without modification. The company collects waste cooking oil from hundreds of restaurants and recycling centers.

A grant from the S.C. Department of Health &

Environmental Control allows Midlands Biofuels to provide biodiesel fuel across the state at a discounted price. The advantages of using biodiesel are increased performance and power and decreased emissions. Since South Carolina imports 98 percent of its diesel and gasoline fuels, using local biodiesel means less reliance on imported fuel.

This unique program allows Allendale County residents the opportunity to recycle their waste cooking oil rather than pouring it down the drain. With every gallon recycled in the county, one gallon of biodiesel can be produced.

The collaboration between the two companies, made on National Bio-Energy Day, could inspire similar ventures across the state, in which farmers can grow canola and bio-crops on the same farm. Participating farmers can purchase bio-diesel for their tractors at a $1 discount from Bio-Joe for a limited time and would also benefit from added revenues from crop rotations.

For more information contact Joe Renwick at 803-718-6323.

State of Agriculture

Its overall impact is yet to be determined as farmers try to interpret the bill for their individual operations. The direct subsidies farmers have received over the years have been eliminated.

Not only is agriculture our biggest industry, but we count on our farmers to feed us and our families. The state's 8,000 livestock and poultry farms produce nearly 300,000 cattle, 224,000 hogs, 4.2 million layers, and 226 million broilers. We are doing more than just feeding our state, as increased exports of soybeans and wheat from the port reflect substantial opportunities for S.C. farmers.

Soybean acreage is up to 488,000 acres, the highest it's been in some time. The I-95 corridor is the top producing area for soybeans. It's looking to be a good year for beans, even though the prices are always a challenge.

Peanuts are extremely important in Orangeburg and Calhoun counties, as the top producing counties in the state. We have some 106,000 acres in production statewide. Three new buying points are up and running for a total of 12 buying stations in our state.

Irrigation is becoming more and more common. As farmers like to say, "Irrigation controls your destiny." Putting the precise amount of moisture at exactly the right time can mean the difference between crop failure and crop abundance. This is especially true for peanuts. We saw drastic differences on our own farm this year.

The number of farms in our state is constantly changing, as some farms consolidate and others, sadly, go out of business or change directions. But a new and very bright note is the number of farms reporting income from agritourism. More than 580 farms reported income of $5.5 million from visitors who came to their farms to buy local produce, tour their facilities, or have hands-on interaction. From pumpkin patches to corn mazes, to pick-your-own vegetables and on-farm restaurants featuring home-grown food, agritourism numbers are climbing steadily.

People love getting back to their roots, and teaching their children that milk comes from cows, not the dairy section of the grocery store, and that vegetables are grown in fields. Agritourism farms that let people walk through their fields and pick peaches, strawberries, or tomatoes, among other edibles, are offering lessons that don't come in books.

This is an exciting time for agriculture in South Carolina, and SCDA is always here to support our local farmers and consumers. Visit our new website to see what a difference agriculture makes in your life! Go to www.agriculture.sc.gov.

S.C. Ag Council to Learn about 2014 Farm Bill

The November meeting of the South Carolina Ag Council will feature Harry Ott, State Executive Director of the Farm Service Agency, speaking about the 2014 Farm Bill. The meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 13 at Farm Bureau, 724 Knox Abbot Drive in Cayce.

A Beaufort stew will be served at 11:30 a.m., with Mr. Ott scheduled to speak at noon. The meeting will adjourn at 12:30. In addition, the council is having its annual Holiday Fair featuring vendors from the SC Specialty Food Association. They will be on site from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Their locally grown products are popular as Christmas presents.

Deadline for advanced reservations of $10 for SCAC members is Friday, Nov. 7. Registration at the door or for non-members is $15 per person, which includes lunch.

Even the vegetable garden is designed for beauty as well as for its lush fresh produce in every season.

Several ponds and water features offer even more interesting sights. One of the most unusual is the Spring House, an open air structure with an authentic English thatched roof. The walls are comprised of panels which can be closed for privacy or open to the breezes that sweep over the water.

The formal garden, surrounded by tall clipped hedges, is a work of art in itself. Laid out with wide grassy walkways and a central fountain, it includes unusual specimen plants as well as more familiar favorites. Even the vegetable garden is designed for beauty as well as for its lush fresh produce in every season.

Other areas of interest are the pack house, a cut flower garden, the peach meadow, a forest boardwalk, a pine bay, and the rose field. But the most unique structure is the Green Roof, a 6,000 square-foot maintenance shed that was designed with a sloped, elevated garden on the roof. Grasses, palms, shrubs, bulbs, perennials and annuals offer a stunning display of texture and color.

The Green Roof is actually a garden installed on the roof of the maintenance shed.

The garden is open to the public on a limited basis for tours, classes, workshops, and special events. The S.C. Agriculture Council was fortunate to book a tour in October. For a schedule of events, visit www.moorefarmsbg.org or contact Rebecca Turk at info@moorefarmsbg.org.
