Cattle Sales Highest Ever in South Carolina

Cattle sales in South Carolina have reached all-time highs, with no end in sight. Receipts can run to $600,000 in a single day at one of the large auction houses.

The state has six cattle auctions, and all of them are posting large numbers of animals sold at premium prices. Cattle producers out West are trying to recover from devastating droughts that occurred several years ago, which forced many of them to sell off their herds. Local cattlemen are reaping the rewards as buyers from Texas and other states are replenishing their herds.

A recent trip to the Saluda Cattle Auction saw 640 head of cattle pass through in one day, bringing top prices. The bred cows and cow-calf pairs sold well, with most of them slated to be shipped out of state as replacement brood stock. The older bulls are also bringing excellent prices as buyers seek to improve their herds.

Owner/partner Harold "Buddy" Coleman, who has managed the Saluda auction for 16 years, said "These are the highest prices ever, we don't know how long they will last."

Good quality cows can bring $1,000, and some of the top bulls are selling for $2,500 to $3,000. Most of the steers and calves are going to feed lots in Iowa and Kansas, among other places.

"We don't have any feed lots in South Carolina," he explained. "Our cattle are being shipped to Tennessee, Kentucky, Texas, Nebraska and Kansas." After being finished, or fattened for slaughter, they go to nearby processing plants and then are shipped back to South Carolina as packaged beef.

Even though sending a load of cattle to Kansas can cost about $5,500 in shipping fees, there's not much alternative, Coleman said. While South Carolina used to have several commercial feed lots, they have all been phased out, and only a few processing plants are left. That means nearly all the calves go out of state. Nearly 80 percent of the cattle sold in a recent week were classified as "feeders."

While most of the auctions have similar set-ups, each has its own schedule. In Saluda, the goats and hogs sell first, then the cattle. Everyone knows the routine.

Farmers drive up to the back of the barn, where the animals are unloaded and funneled into appropriate lots. Each is marked as it goes through a chute. Just before they are herded into the sales ring, the animals are weighed.

They are divided into categories: bred cows, cow/calf pairs, older bulls, steers, calves, bulls for breeding, and older cows. Most of the animals are sold individually, with brisk bidding and quick sales. By the end of the day, most of the cattle are loaded onto trucks.

A good many of the replacement cows are staying here, Coleman said. Local cattlemen are upgrading their own herds with good quality bred cows and heifers.

Although all the sales are one-day events, it takes a day or two to prep the barn and another couple of days to get all the cattle sent out and the barn cleaned up. About 15 part-time employees handle the details, from feeding and watering the animals that come in early to handling them the day of the auction. Coleman's son Joseph and his daughter Demi McDaniel are the third generation working at the sale barn.

Celebrate Carolina Cattle

June is the time of year when we celebrate two segments of the cattle industry with Beef Month and Dairy Month. Both the dairy industry and the beef industry are independently successful in South Carolina and have a huge impact on our state's economy.

As most of you know, I'm a little biased towards dairy since I grew up on a dairy farm in Orangeburg County. Our Holsteins kept our family busy before and after school, on weekends and holidays. I've participated in numerous Dairy Month activities over the years, from throwing out first pitches at baseball games to cow milking contests.

In 2013, South Carolina's 75 dairy farms produced more than 30 million gallons of milk and generated over $55 million in cash receipts. Newberry, Orangeburg, and Bamberg are our top-producing counties.

Like other branches of farming, the dairy business has gone high-tech. Although you probably won't find them in a park, did you know that dairy cows have their own type of carousel? These modern, moving rotary parlors allow large numbers of cows to be milked gently and efficiently, while greatly increasing the amount of good, safe milk that is produced. And the way we feed cows today is also a combination of art and science; it takes a lot of knowhow to satisfy four stomachs.

One thing many people don't realize about the dairy business is how these animals contribute to the beef industry.

The summer meeting of the S.C. Christmas Tree Association is scheduled for June 19 and 20 at Steve and Judy Penland's Christmas Tree Farm in York. The Friday evening program begins with a field demonstration that will show how to prepare, lay out, and plant a new field. A farm tour will follow the demonstration, along with a cookout.

On Saturday, a school tour demonstration will be presented by Judy Penland and Allison Moses. After the demonstration, the Penlands will share their customers' procedures by having guest families actually visit the farm for their tree purchase. Other topics that will be discussed are tree trimming techniques, disease recognition, and equipment demonstrations.

There will be no charge for registration for members or attendees from affiliate state associations. Non-member farms are required to pay a $50 registration fee. This fee will be credited toward 2015 membership dues if the farm chooses to join the association in the first month of attendance.

To register, please notify Steve Penland at 803-366-7605 or spenland68@bellsouth.net.

Watermelon Field Day July 9

A Watermelon Field Day will be held at the Edisto Research and Education Center in Blackville on July 9. Registration will be at 8 a.m. at the office complex, with lectures starting at 8:15 a.m. in the auditorium, followed by field studies.

Topics include an overview of watermelon board activities by Matthew Cornwell, a lecture on spraying melons by Dr. Tony Keinath, Tri-Hishtil plant grafting by Bert Lemkes and honey bee biology by Jennifer Tsuruda.

At the conclusion of the morning session, the group will tour research projects and test crop varieties. Certified Crop Advisor and Pesticide License credits will be offered.

The field research tours will include: Bayer

Feed A Bee, grafting update, UAV and sensor imaging, merge and root knot nematodes. The watermelon trial will demonstrate 81 different varieties.

Following the field tour participants will return to the office complex for cold watermelon, lunch and further discussion.

After lunch, the group will return to the field and look inside a bee hive. A limited number of bee suits are available. Those not suited can watch from inside the bus with audio from those leading the tour.

For details and directions, call the Edisto Research and Education Center at 803-284-3343 Ext. 221, SC Department of Agriculture, Matt Cornwell at 803-734-0467, or your local county agent.

Certified Roadside Markets in Season

With a variety of produce coming into season in South Carolina, it is the perfect time of year to visit your local Certified Roadside Markets. Shopping at a Certified Roadside Market allows consumers access to local products that are produced in South Carolina. Visiting a roadside market also often allows consumers the opportunity to see where and who their food comes from, allowing individuals the opportunity to make a connection between the farm and their fork.

For more information on how to become a South Carolina Certified Roadside Market or general information on the program, visit our website, agriculture.sc.gov/certifiedroadsidemarketprogram or contact Program Coordinator, Laura Lester, at 803-734-0648 or llester@scca.sc.gov.

It's a fact of life that older dairy cows, which no longer produce enough milk to be profitable, are sold for utility purposes in the beef market. Likewise, approximately half of the calves born on dairy farms also go to the sale barns.

Fortunately for our state, cattle sales are at an all-time high. The cattle markets in Darlington, Saluda, Chesnee, Orangeburg, Williamston, and Chester, report that near-record numbers of animals are bringing top prices. Prolonged droughts out West over the last several years forced many ranchers to sell off their herds of beef cattle. Now, they are looking to replenish those herds, and they're coming to South Carolina to do it.

Beef cattle are bringing excellent prices. An outstanding cross-bred bull can bring $2,500 to $3,000, while a good quality bred cow might sell for $1,200 or even $1,600.

We're currently in the process of visiting all the cattle auction markets in the state so we can let consumers know how big an impact they make. The Saluda market, which is featured in this issue of the Market Bulletin, sold 640 animals in a recent week. Of course our market news staff attends all sales to keep everyone aware of pricing.

We expect the beef cattle industry to continue to grow, both in numbers and in value. Cattle are already the sixth top commodity in the state, with an economic impact of over $150 million last year. Anderson County usually tops the state in numbers of beef farms operating.

So during June, we can all show how much we appreciate our local dairy and cattle farmers when we visit the grocery store. Let's kick off the summer right and celebrate Beef Month and Dairy Month with a delicious, juicy steak or a sweet, refreshing ice cream cone. I know I will!

June is Beef Month

June is Beef Month in South Carolina – and our cattle and beef industry is geared up to celebrate the success of this top-ten agriculture cash commodity that consistently contributes to the Palmetto State's new wealth and economic growth.

Miller Foster, a cattle producer from Spartanburg and president of the S.C. Cattlemen's Association, said that more than 3,900 cattle producers in South Carolina raise quality animals on their farms each day. "Cattle producers care for their animals and land the same as their individual families," he said.

Today's consumers can be assured of safe, lean and nutritious beef from our producers.

Darren Carter, a cattle producer from Ninety-Six and chairman of the S.C. Beef Council, said, "Lean beef is important to each individual, and it promotes a healthy lifestyle." He encourages eating beef to get ZIP (zinc, iron and protein).

As the summer months begin, both Foster and Carter continue to promote beef. It is especially good for grilling for Father's Day, as well as all during the summer grilling season, which is typically Memorial Day through Labor Day.

For additional information on both organizations of the "Beef: It's What's For Dinner"® campaign, contact Roy Copelan at scbeef@scda.sc.gov or 803-734-9806.

Walnut-Crusted Roast with Blue Cheese Mashed Potatoes

This Eye of Round Roast only looks like it took you half a day to prepare. The simple walnut crust comes together quickly, and the roast is placed in the oven for about two hours - the perfect amount of time to set the table and visit with your guests.

Total Recipe Time: 1-3/4 to 2 hours
Makes 8 to 10 servings

- 1 beef Eye of Round Roast (2 to 3 pounds)
- 4 cups prepared mashed potatoes, warmed
- 1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese

Walnut Crust

- 1/2 cup finely chopped walnuts
- 3 tablespoons finely chopped green onion
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

1. Heat oven to 325 degrees. Combine Walnut Crust ingredients; press evenly onto all surfaces of beef roast.

2. Place roast on rack in shallow roasting pan. Insert ovenproof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part of beef. Do not add water or cover. Roast in 325 degree oven 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 hours for medium rare doneness (Do not overcook.)

3. Remove roast when meat thermometer registers 135 degrees. Transfer roast to carving board; tent loosely with aluminum foil. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes. (Temperature will continue to rise about 10 degrees to reach 145 degrees for medium rare.)

4. Meanwhile combine mashed potatoes and cheese in large bowl; keep warm.

5. Carve beef roast into thin slices; season with salt and pepper as desired. Serve with mashed potatoes.

Cook's Tip:

Any type of prepared mashed potatoes may be used in this recipe: instant, refrigerated, frozen or homemade.
