Selections are expected to be even better at the three Fall Plant and Flower Festivals this year.

Regional Plant & Flower Festivals Popular Fall Events

The S.C. Department of Agriculture is gearing up for yet another year of fall plant and flower festivals, which will be held at the three state farmers markets in the Upstate, Midlands, and Pee Dee regions.

The plant and flower festivals have become events that South Carolinians look forward to each year. The newest of the three festivals, the Midlands Fall Plant and Flower Festival, is in its sixth year at the State Farmers Market.

Families in the Upstate have been enjoying AutumnFest at the Greenville Farmers Market for 15 years. This will be the 23rd consecutive Fall Plant and Flower Festival at the Pee Dee Farmers Market, the oldest of the three!

These annual events are the perfect opportunity to spend a day with the family prepping for the cooler fall temperatures that will have everyone excited about spending time in the yard.

At each event, attendees can expect to find a variety of seasonal plants and flowers, along with lawn and garden décor, handcrafted furniture and other goods, and products from members of the S.C. Specialty Food Association. For those looking to really “amp” up their landscapes, families can visit with various local landscape lighting and design vendors that will be exhibiting at the festivals.

While shopping, consumers are encouraged to look for the Certified South Carolina logos, which support local growers and producers. A variety of food trucks will also be on site to satisfy hunger cravings throughout the day.

Have a question about your garden or landscape? Don't fret! Local experts with Clemson Extension's Master Gardener program will be available to answer any questions you may have.

The S.C. Department of Agriculture encourages families across the state to attend one of these great seasonal events at your local state farmers market.

Commissioner

I think Clemson has done just that for the farmers in this state over the last few years, beginning with the hiring of Dr. Jim Clements as president.

Clemson University President Dr. James P. Clements and his new team of agriculture leaders are poised to accomplish some great things – not only for those wearing orange, but for all of us in South Carolina agriculture. Together this group of esteemed colleagues, for whom I have tremendous respect and am glad to call each one a friend, has positioned Clemson University as a significant economic catalyst for the state.

Here's an introduction to a few key players on Clemson's "farm team" who will help develop new opportunities for our state's farmers over the coming years.

Dr. Clements became Clemson University's 15th president in December 2013, and he has stepped into this role with intense focus. Much like a coach, Dr. Clements has orchestrated a strategic game plan that is growing Clemson University at a rapid pace.

I'm impressed with how his team launched the largest campus development initiative in university history. Students are applying in record numbers for a spot in the freshman class. More than 22,500 applicants applied last year! I've seen first-hand how his Volunteers from Lee and several other counties, along with the staff at Lee State Park near Bishopville, put plenty of muscle into improving recreational trails.

Horseback Riders Trade Boots for Work Gloves to Improve Trails at Local State Park

S.C. Department of Agriculture collaborated with S.C. Parks, Recreation and Tourism on a project using volunteers to improve recreational trails at Lee State Park this summer, with outstanding results. The park, horseback riders, and hikers from across the state are reaping the benefits of several work days, with more projects planned for the fall.

The project started with a conversation between Lee State Park general manager Brad Lane and Marsha Hewitt, equine marketing specialist for the S.C. Department of Agriculture. Part of Hewitt's job is to expand opportunities for horseback riders, and she knew from first-hand experience that the trails at Lee needed better signage.

"I've ridden there for years, and I've been lost more times than I can remember," Hewitt said. "That has been a major concern for the park, so we decided to do something about it."

When she suggested to Lane that marking the perimeter of the park would be helpful, he agreed immediately. She also pointed out that several deep bogs kept riders from using some of the trails. They set a volunteer work day to see if anyone would help.

Lee County residents started a Facebook page for Friends of Lee State Park, and in less than a month, it had more than 200 members. Word spread quickly about trail work days, and 30 riders came from as far as 60 miles away to help mark and clear trails. Armed with shovels and work gloves, they filled in several deep holes, pruned overhead branches and cleared debris. Other workers took bright orange tags and walked the perimeter, marking trails as they went.

Most importantly, the trail was rerouted to avoid a dangerous section of trail that crossed a creek filled with roots and stumps. The new crossing boasts a culvert and safe passage to a section of the park that was mostly unused.

"I was blown away by their enthusiasm and the amount of work they did," Lane said about the volunteers. He and his staff have worked diligently to make the trails safer and more user-friendly.

A benefit trail ride at Lee State Park on Aug. 22 served two purposes: it raised money for further improvements to the horse facilities, and it generated income for the park itself. Lane reported that the park's 23 equestrian campsites were completely booked that weekend, bringing in significant revenue during an otherwise slow season. And more than 100 riders raised nearly $1,500 for trail improvements, which will include geotextile fabric to prevent erosion, plus additional fencing.

Hewitt hopes that the volunteer concept can be used in other state parks and public areas.

facilities plan has been set into motion, preparing the university for the next 50 years of growth. Having been around Jim a few times over the last year, I think he was born for this job.

Dr. George Askew, Vice President of Public Service and Agriculture, is working tirelessly to make sure that public service and agriculture programs are meeting the state's agribusiness needs. We've served together on the South Carolina Advocates for Agriculture board, and it's been a pleasure to see how his work brings together agriculture, forestry and natural resources groups, to work cohesively with Clemson University and its Extension services.

Together, we're breaking new ground in the agriculture industry. You can hear a little of a fading New Jersey accent from George in conversation, but he's one of us now, and I doubt we'd let him go back.

Dr. Thomas Dobbins is the director of Clemson University's Cooperative Extension Service. Dr. Dobbins understands the challenges that face South Carolina farmers and has focused on building teams to develop solutions. He's also been a tremendous asset and role model to high school students who attend Commissioner's School, and it is quite rewarding to introduce these bright young students to various careers in agriculture or natural resources.

Like me, Tom grew up chasing dairy cows on his family farm so he knows his way around the farms of this state.

Dr. Chris Ray, newly appointed director of the Clemson University Experiment Station, is a third generation farmer with a rock-solid working knowledge of South Carolina's agribusiness industry, and he's served in many different roles at the university. Chris is heading up plant research and trials of crops in multiple environments.

These research findings are extremely beneficial to SCDA lab operations and to farmers across the state. You may spot Chris working at one of the Clemson Research and Education Centers or campus farms. Also, if you're in the right place at the right time, you can hear Chris play some good old country music on his acoustical guitar.

Solving agriculture issues, like world hunger and growth in our industry, is a constant focus at Clemson University. The new Farm Team at Clemson, working in tandem with SCDA and other agencies and organizations, is moving South Carolina agriculture toward some winning seasons – bringing our statewide goal of growing the agri-economic impact to a $50 billion industry by 2020 closer to fruition!

Public Meetings Scheduled to Discuss Deer Management Legislation

The S.C. Department of Natural Resources has scheduled seven public meetings to receive input from hunters concerning DNR supported legislation related to future deer management in South Carolina.

The meetings are an effort by DNR to work with leaders in the House of Representatives to address any remaining questions or concerns related to the legislation. Each meeting will include a presentation by DNR on the background and data related to the legislation, as well as public comment and questions.

Contact DNR at 803-734-3886 with any questions about agendas or sites.

All meetings will begin at 7 p.m. and the dates and locations are as follows:

- Tuesday, Sept. 22, Pee Dee Research and Education Center Auditorium, 2200 Pocket Road, Florence.
- Thursday, Sept. 24, University of South Carolina-Lancaster, Stevens Auditorium, 476 Hubbard Drive, Lancaster.
- Tuesday, Sept. 29, North Augusta High School Auditorium, 2000 Knobcone Ave., North Augusta.
- Tuesday, Oct. 6, Pendleton High School Auditorium, 7324 Hwy 187, Pendleton.
- Thursday, Oct. 8, Piedmont Technical College James Medford Family Event Center Auditorium, Building N, 620 North Emerald Road, Greenwood.
- Tuesday, Oct. 13, Orangeburg-Calhoun Technical College Roquemore Auditorium, Building R, 3250 St. Mathews Road, Orangeburg.
- Thursday, Oct. 15, Auditorium, 491 Hampton Street, Waltherboro.

Senate Bill 454 was filed on behalf of DNR by Senator Chip Campsen of Charleston in February. The legislation proposes a limit of four antlered bucks per year and that all deer harvested are tagged. The Antlerless Deer Quota Program that many landowners and hunt clubs utilize would continue to be available with quotas being issued for both bucks and does. The bill passed the Senate in March and currently resides in the House of Representatives where it will be considered when the legislative session begins in January.

According to Charles Ruth, DNR Deer and Wild Turkey Program coordinator, "The state's deer population has changed in recent years and although there are still some areas where deer numbers and reports of agricultural damage remain high, the overall population has decreased, as indicated by a 35 percent decline in harvest. Reasons for the decline include habitat changes related to forest management, extremely liberal deer harvests over the last two decades, and the colonization of the state by coyotes since the turn of the century."

Although there is a 5-buck limit prescribed in the two upstate Game Zones, these limits have never been enforceable. In the coastal Game Zones, state law specifies there is "no limit" on antlered deer, a situation that has never been a function of DNR.

This lack of a reasonable bag limit on bucks is in stark contrast to other states and to the approach with other fish and game species in South Carolina, which typically have limits. From a management standpoint, tagging all deer is beneficial because it would allow better regulation and manipulation of the harvest of antlerless deer (does).

September is National Honey Month

The National Honey Board wants to focus on all the benefits that make honey sweet enough to have its very own month!

Honey is the fabulous kitchen staple that we turn to for a touch of sweetness, to balance out flavors (like the bitterness of gluten-free flour), add beautiful color to any dish, and lock in moisture of grilled meats (making it the perfect tailgate sidekick). It is also a great all-natural alternative to granulated sweetener, but this liquid gold can do so much more than just add a touch of sweetness to your tea.

Thanks to its humectant and antimicrobial properties, honey is an effective moisturizer and fights bacteria to keep skin clear, making it a great addition to any beauty regimen.

Have a pesky cough? You can use a small dose of honey before bedtime to provide a great improvement of nighttime cough and sleep difficulty. It also soothes your sore throat with a touch of sweetness.

Needing a little extra boost to push you through your workout? Honey's got you covered with 17 grams of carbohydrates and only 64 calories per tablespoon for an all-natural burst of energy.

The Honey Feast newsletter features recipes that showcase the versatility of nature's favorite sweetener.

Honey-Peanut Butter Protein Energy Balls

1¼ cup old fashioned oats
3 tablespoons shredded coconut
½ cup sliced almonds, finely chopped
1 tablespoon hemp seeds, shelled (optional)
1 scoop whey protein powder
½ cup honey
½ cup dried apricots, chopped
½ cup peanut butter

In a medium bowl add the oats, coconut, almonds, hemp seeds and protein powder. Stir until well distributed. Add the honey, apricots and peanut butter and stir well.

Put mixing bowl into the refrigerator for about 20 to 30 minutes. Then roll the mixture into rounded balls. When chilled, they can last about 5 days.
