Thoroughbred Association Recognizes Industry Leaders

By Marsha Hewitt,
SC Department of Agriculture

CAMDEN--The new president of the SC Thoroughbred Owners and Breeders Association has a vision for moving the state's racing industry forward. Aiken's Jack Sadler took over as president of the association in December, replacing Lee Christian, a dedicated horseman who had held that office for 11 years. Christian, formerly of Charleston, was honored at the group's annual awards dinner on Jan. 16, both for his service and for having bred the 2015 Older Mare of the Year.

"I'd like to see Lee give an award to himself," quipped Sadler, referring to the numerous presentations Christian has made. His mare Persnickity, who was trained by Goree Smith of Elloree, had 42 lifetime starts and winnings of more than $339,000. Christian and his wife Gwen, the former treasurer of the association, were recognized for their years of leadership.

Smith racked up several other prestigious awards at the banquet, including S.C. Breeder of the Year, trainer of the Older Horse of the Year (named Gin Makes You Sin), and several other successful racehorses. A long-time board member of the Thoroughbred association, Smith and his wife Bari have bred, owned and trained Thoroughbreds for 40 years. Smith is also the driving force behind the Elloree Trials, a spring charity event that features both Thoroughbred and Quarter Horse racing.

The SCTOBA awards banquet is the highlight of the year for the several hundred people who own, breed and train racehorses in this state. Although they are quick to point out that South Carolina has very limited racing, horses trained here are known throughout the country as highly competitive and successful racehorses. The state's racing industry is valued at more than $250 million.

TV sportscaster Tom Durkin presents the Trainer of the Year award to Goree Smith and his wife Bari.

Sadler, who served as vice president of Dogwood Stable in Aiken for 37 years, is now vice president of operations for Eclipse Thoroughbred Partners and Dogwood after their recent merger. He is looking forward to serving the owners and breeders group as its new president. Passionate about promoting the state's racing industry, Sadler plans to visit other training facilities in the state and wants to recruit new members.

Renowned race caller, analyst and TV personality Tom Durkin was the featured speaker at the awards dinner. Durkin, who splits his time between New York and Florida, received the Eclipse Award of Merit in 2015 for his outstanding career as a sportscaster. The Thoroughbred industry's highest honor, the Eclipse award is given for lifetime achievement.

Durkin entertained the crowd with hilarious stories gleaned from his 43 years as announcer at the world's most famous horse races. He showed film clips of some of his memorable calls and talked about what he considered the sport's best races. Among them were the heroic battle between Derby winner Winning Colors and the unbeaten filly Personal Ensign, who came from nine lengths back to win in a photo finish, and the last race of the unbeatable Cigar in 1995.

The speaker joked about calling a race in the dark and his gamble in announcing the winner of a photo finish before the results were posted. The 1988 Breeders Cup was, in his opinion, the single greatest day of racing in history.

Now in its 34th year, SEWE features more than 500 artists and exhibitors from around the globe who showcase their crafts to an estimated 40,000 attendees. You'll find our South Carolina Department of Agriculture tent on Marion Square with more than 30 Certified SC specialty foods vendors. Choose from BBQ sauces, jams and jellies, olive oils, and specialty spices to give your Valentine a gift with some local flavor.

Once again this year, we hope to inspire you to get a little "wild in the kitchen" with cooking demonstrations from Fresh on the Menu chefs. Hear from chefs whose restaurants have helped put South Carolina on the culinary map with creative recipes, authentic cuisine and the art of using South Carolina's freshest ingredients to make mouthwatering menus.

Goree Smith's Sittin' and Sippin' captured the Two-Year-Old Horse of the Year honors at the SCTOBA awards banquet. The filly, who was bred by Smith and is co-owned with his brother Hamp, won her last race at Laurel Park, Maryland by 10 lengths.

State's Corn Growers Look forward to a Better Year in 2016

By Jim Melvin, Clemson University

BLACKVILLE — Corn growers in South Carolina escaped the wrath of early October's epic rainfall, but the damage had already been done. Long before the brutal storm released its first drop, a severe summer drought and accompanying heat wave scorched cornfields throughout most of the state.

As a result, farmers lost tens of millions of dollars, thousands of acres of planted corn were destroyed, and much of the corn that did survive produced disappointing yields and quality.

So now that 2015 has come and gone, what's in store for corn growers in 2016?

"After last year's misfortunes, there is a lot of disappointment and uncertainty about this year," said David Gunter, Clemson Extension's feed grain specialist who is based at the Edisto Research and Education Center near Blackville. "Not only did we have damaged yields, but the markets crashed last year. Corn growers are facing some tough decisions as they attempt to find ways to recoup some of their losses."

In the southern portions of the state, corn is typically planted in the last half of March. In the Midlands, it is planted in April. And in the Piedmont, it is planted in early May. But in many regions of South Carolina, pond-sized pools of standing water remain on cornfields more than three months after the monster storm. If these don't recede in time for planting season, a lot of valuable acreage will be unusable.

"Ideally, a relatively dry winter would get some of this water out of the fields," Gunter said. A mild, moist spring followed by a relatively mild summer that includes 3-5 inches of rain per month will create ideal growing conditions for corn in 2016. If all goes well, harvests will begin in August and end in September.

Gunter said that many corn growers will devote more of their acreage to soybeans, which have relatively low upfront costs.

"I keep hearing that 'we're just going to plant beans,' Gunter said. "Farmers will try to cut costs as much as they can. Instead of planting 1,300 acres of corn this year, a grower might plant 600 acres and use the rest for beans."

Regardless of what happened in the past, the future is not all doom and gloom.

Clemson hopes to receive $2.5 million from the South Carolina Legislature that will help it expand research and outreach programs that can help growers recover from the 2015 mess, and Gunter believes that farmers in South Carolina have the will and fortitude to rebound from almost anything.

"The good thing about growers is they are optimistic and have short memories," Gunter said. "This year offers a fresh start. The farmers of South Carolina are used to making tough decisions. Regardless, let's hope we never have another year like 2015."

Orangeburg Farmers Win Yield Contests

Ray Jameson of Orangeburg won first place in the no-till/strip-till irrigated division of the 2015 National Corn Growers Association's Corn Yield Contest in South Carolina. Jameson won with Pioneer brand hybrid P1303HR, which yielded 323.0808 bushels per acre.

Russ Jameson of Orangeburg won first place in the irrigated division, winning with Pioneer brand hybrid P1303HR, which yielded 313.1920 bushels per acre. The Jamesons each earned one of the 218 state titles won by growers planting Pioneer hybrids.

In 2015, David Hula of Charles City, Va. broke the world record of 532.0271 bushels per acre, using Pioneer P1197AM brand corn on his contest plot.

The NCGA Corn Yield Contest is an annual national competition with the goal of capitalizing on the high genetic yield potential of today's corn hybrids.

Chef Orchid Paulmeier of One Hot Mamas and Chef Ramone Dickerson of Wing City and 2 Fat 2 Fly will dish out some of their secrets to mixing in Certified SC Grown products. You'll find a full schedule of cooking demos included in this edition of the Bulletin.

And the good news is, you can cook like a Fresh on the Menu chef at home! Just pick up a copy of our "Wild in the Kitchen" Cookbook. The colorful pages are filled with recipes from the 2016 SEWE chefs along with information about how to purchase your favorite specialty foods. You'll also find tidbits about the important South Carolina agricultural commodities used in the recipes.

New for 2016, South Carolina farmers will be on hand, eager to engage in conversation about how our food goes from pasture to plate in our "Ask a Farmer" booth. It's a good reminder to show some love for our farmers as they are still recovering from the October floods. Donations are being accepted for the farmer flood relief fund, Plant it Forward SC, through the end of February.

In addition to the restaurants featured in the cooking demos, Charleston is home to dozens of Fresh on the Menu options with something sure to please even the most discerning palates. Valentine's weekend is the perfect chance to treat that special someone to a fresher, tastier dining experience.

There's really something for everyone at SEWE, even if hunting isn't your thing. I hope you'll join us this year at the Southeastern Wildlife Exposition as we celebrate the wealth of natural resources found right here in South Carolina.

Applications Available for Commissioner's School

Rising high school juniors and seniors may now apply for the next South Carolina Commissioner's School for Agriculture, which will be held at Clemson University on July 16-22.

The Commissioner's School for Agriculture is a premier summer academic program coordinated by the SC Department of Agriculture and Clemson University's College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences. This program exposes students to academic offerings and potential careers in agriculture and natural resources through workshops, field studies, and laboratories.

Students learn about greenhouse production, soil science, athletic turf-grass management, animal and veterinary sciences, packaging science, aquaculture, forestry, wildlife, and natural resources. The school also includes trips to Clemson University Research Farms, the Clemson Experimental Forest, and a whitewater rafting trip down the Chattooga River.

Since its inaugural year in 2004, the Commissioner's School has graduated 428 students from the program, with 76 percent of those studying agriculture in college and 40 percent working in an agriculture field.

Applications are available online at clemson.edu/cafls/scdsa. They must be post marked by April 1. For information about the school, contact Clemson's Katie Black at 864-656-6662 or hulse@clemson.edu, or SCDA's Elizabeth Shuler at 803-734-0328 or eshuler@scda.sc.gov.

SC Agritourism Passport Program Launched

The South Carolina Agritourism Association launched its inaugural Passport Program in January. Throughout 2016, visitors are encouraged to go to participating farms to have their passports stamped in order to earn prizes.

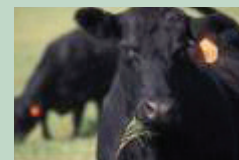

Passports are available at all 44 farms which are taking part in the program. "As you visit participating agritourism destinations, be sure to ask the farmer to stamp your passport," said Agritourism Director Jackie Moore.

"The more stamps you receive, the more prizes you will earn at the end of the year. One lucky participant will win $100 worth of Certified SC Specialty Food products."

South Carolina has many agritourism locations that offer a wide variety of activities, such as crop mazes, u-picks, hayrides, wineries, and more. For a full list of agritourism destinations across the state, visit scfarmfun.org.
