Black Cowboy Festival Showcases History

By Marsha Hewitt, SCDA Staff

REMBERT--Now in its 20th year, the 2016 Black Cowboy Festival is set for May 5-8 at Greenfield Farm in Sumter County. This fun-filled family event takes a historical trip back in time to spotlight the role of the black cowboy in settling this country, focusing on culture, heritage, and agriculture.

The festival starts on Thursday with art and music, storytelling, a historical drama, a documentary on the Buffalo Soldier, a homestead area with country cooking, soap making, and quilting, and a fish fry at 6:30 p.m. A trail ride, pony and wagon rides for children, and live entertainment are just a few of the attractions. Food vendors, line dancing, and the Friday night western dinner and dance are crowd favorites.

Saturday's events will kick off at 10:30 a.m. with a parade of cowboys, a gospel show, Sumter Jazz Band, youth and adult competitions, rodeo events, demonstrations by top riders, and a cowboy monologue. One of the highlights is a trick riding demonstration by Zyarriah Myers, granddaughter of festival founders Mark and Sandra Myers.

"People come from all over the United States and as far away as Canada," Mrs. Myers said, adding that many people bring their RVs and stay on site for up to a week. While in the area they may visit other sites of interest, such as Pearl Fryar's Topiary Garden, Swan Lake, and the Mary McLeod Bethune Park.

Festival guests are invited to take a tour of a partially restored former slave cabin with authentic furnishings. A vintage doctor's buggy, antique farm equipment, and many hand-operated tools will be on display.

But horses will be the big draw, with Saturday's events showcasing cowboys, competitions, and demonstrations. The festival will take place at Greenfield Farm, 4585 Spencer Rd. in Rembert. Admission is $20 for adults, $8 for children 12 and up. For more information visit www.blackcowboyfestival.net.

What's Going in the Ground

The end of March is a big deal every year in the statistician and economist world. The National Agriculture Statistics Service, the "numbers people" at USDA, releases its "Prospective Plantings" report — what farmers plan to put in the ground. The various commodity markets look to this report as the foundation of the coming crop year.

This report is an important tool to help us gauge what the estimated crop production will be for South Carolina each year. This year, it's an especially important indicator of the expected farming acres in 2016 and how well farmers are rebounding from last year's devastating flood.

Nationwide, corn planted acreage is up 6 percent from 2015 at 93.6 million acres. If intentions become actual, this will represent the highest planted acreage in the United States since 2013 and the third highest planted acreage in the United States since 1944. Although prices remain below $4 per bushel, corn is generally thought to be more profitable per acre than some other crops.

Soybean acreage is predicted to be about even with last year, down less than 1 percent with planting intentions down or unchanged in 23 of the 31 reporting states. Wheat acreage looks to be down 9 percent with a total of 49.6 million acres, while cotton nationally is up 11 percent at 9.56 million acres.

Farms & Gardens to be Highlighted on Ag Tour

The SC Agricultural Council's spring tour on May 6 will visit several interesting farms and gardens in the Midlands, including a rare look inside one of the South's finest canneries.

The tour starts with Old McCaskill's Farm in Rembert, visits Pearl Fryar's Topiary Garden in Bishopville, and stops for lunch at the SC Cotton Museum. Then it's on to McCall Farms in Effingham, the home of Margaret Holmes and Glory Foods labels, for a special tour of this family-owned cannery. Next, the magnificent Swan Lake in Sumter will provide a visual feast of its world-famous iris and swans. Finally, the bus will stop at Cottle Strawberry Farm near Hopkins so tour-goers can pick their own ripe berries.

The visit at McCaskill's may include daily chores such as feeding the animals and preparing farm-to-table meals. The farm store has meat and vegetables raised on the farm, wool from their sheep, and gift items. Bishopville's Pearl Fryar is an internationally known topiary artist whose delightful presentation charms audiences across the country. His spectacular garden is unforgettable.

After a tour of the South Carolina Cotton Museum, participants will enjoy a farm-to-table boxed lunch before heading to Effingham. McCall Farms promises to be the highlight of the tour. A once-in-a-lifetime tour behind the scenes will show how vegetables go from the field to the delivery truck. McCall Farms cans a wide variety of Southern-style vegetables, plus Greer peaches, the Peanut Patch Boiled Peanuts, and Bruce's® Yams. The vegetables are grown locally and delivered fresh to the cannery, which operates year-round. Tour-goers must wear closed-toed shoes inside the plant.

The tour is open to the public for $55, which includes lunch and snacks. Seating is limited and pre-registration is required by May 3. The bus will leave the Farm Bureau building in West Columbia about 7:30 a.m., with check in at 7 a.m. To register, contact Steve Slice at 803-360-2845 or scagriculturalcouncil@gmail.com.

Funding Available for Farm to School Programs

Funding is now available through the South Carolina Farm to School program. The South Carolina Farm to Institution Program encourages schools to apply for use toward farm-to-school initiatives.

The S.C. Farm to School program facilitates partnerships between farms and schools to serve locally grown and minimally processed foods in school meals. Core goals of the program include: increasing the number of farmers who are certified to provide locally grown products to schools; providing education to food service directors, staff, and teachers on Farm to School practices; and promoting healthy eating among students through hands-on learning activities.

Participating schools must serve at least two fruits and vegetables per month from local sources in school cafeterias, promote Certified SC Grown produce, incorporate nutrition and agriculture education into classroom curriculum, and maintain a school vegetable garden. Funds can be applied toward farm-to-school-programs to promote healthy school environments.

Interested schools can view a technical assistance webinar, available on the website (<http://scfarmtoinstitution.com/farm-to-school/grantees/>). Applications are due by 5 p.m. May 6.

S.C. Agriculture Commissioner Hugh Weathers picks the first strawberries of the season at James R. Sease Farms in Gilbert.

It's Strawberry Season in South Carolina

S.C. Agriculture Commissioner Hugh Weathers kicked off the strawberry season at James R. Sease Farms in Gilbert with the first "official" pick on April 5. Spring has sprung in South Carolina and it's prime time for everyone's favorite treat: farm fresh strawberries.

South Carolina is home to more than 40 strawberry farms offering both U-pick experiences as well as pre-picked berries. Spartanburg County leads the state in strawberry acreage, followed by Lexington County.

"Getting out to the farm is a great way to show support for South Carolina farmers after the very challenging year they faced in 2015," said Commissioner Weathers. "It's also a great opportunity to meet the people growing nutritious food for your family, all while enjoying fresh, local fruits and vegetables."

Strawberry farms are open April through May, but visitors should check the farm's Facebook page or website for specific opening dates, hours of operation and directions. For a full listing of strawberry farms, visit scfarmfun.org.

In South Carolina the intentions are similar, but looking a little closer, there is a drop off in overall planted acres. Corn acres are estimated at 320,000, up 8 percent from last year. Soybeans are down 7 percent from 2015 at 440,000 acres. Peanuts are down slightly at 110,000 acres.

The two most significant drops in acreage are in cotton and wheat. Cotton acres are estimated at 190,000, down 19 percent from last year's 235,000 acres. While cotton has been part of many South Carolina farmers' traditional row crop rotation for years, depressing prices continue to drive acreage down.

Farmers planted only 53 percent, or 90,000 acres, of wheat in the winter of 2016 when compared to winter of 2015 at 170,000 acres. The wheat acreage reflects the lingering effects of flooding and sustained wet conditions throughout the fall and into winter. Because fields were still so wet, many farmers were not able to plant a wheat crop. When I see a field of wheat this spring, it catches my eye because of the reduction. I imagine many of the acres were planted much later than normal.

Overall, of these main row crops grown in South Carolina, acreage is down to around 1 million planted acres from 1.1 million acres in 2015.

SOUTH CAROLINA FFA ASSOCIATION

Grants for Growing

Calhoun Falls FFA members are building eight frames for vegetables for a community garden. Called "Feeding the Falls," the project will grow fresh vegetables for the town's food pantry. The school has a greenhouse that can be used to start vegetable transplants.

Tractor Supply and the National FFA Foundation provide funding for FFA members to make a difference in their communities. The local chapter will maintain the beds during the growing season. The fresh produce will be included with the bi-monthly boxes from the food pantry.

Strawberry Pie

Mary Palmer, Administration

My great-grandmother, Lillian Goodson, handed down this recipe to my grandmother who shared it with me. She loved to bake desserts. I added the "Certified SC" strawberries.

Ingredients:
1 quart Certified SC strawberries, sliced
2 lemons, juiced
1 baked 9 inch pie crust shell
1 can condensed milk
1 large Cool Whip

Directions:
Blend milk and Cool Whip together and add lemon juice and berries. Pour into crust and refrigerate for 2 or 3 hours before serving.
