ASC Greenway Offers Variety of Family Activities

'Working Landscape' Encompasses Nature Preserve and a Farm

By Marsha Hewitt
Editor, SC Market Bulletin

FORT MILL--Mom, dad, grandparents, kids—even the dogs have fun at the Anne Springs Close Greenway! When you visit, plan an all day trip, or even several trips, because there's no way to see or do it all in one day.

Children swim in the pool, enjoy water sports and participate in a number of programs like scuba diving, art, and clay and pottery workshops. Summer camps include adventure, nature and horseback riding. Adults and kids use the fitness center and tennis courts year-around, and the Greenway partners with the town of Fort Mill to offer soccer, softball and other team sports.

Family activities on this vast slice of paradise seem endless. Lake Haigler is the best known of the seven lakes and ponds that offer fishing, kayaking, and canoeing, with hiking trails meandering throughout the property. A portion of Nation Ford Road, originally an ancient Indian trail that ran from Augusta to Philadelphia prior to the American Revolutionary War, is but one of the many historic features on the property. A couple of 17th century cabins and an old grist mill take visitors back in time.

Memberships at The Greenway offer special privileges like fishing, use of the dog park, hiking, and free concerts. Thursday concerts in the open air amphitheater are a popular way for people to spend a summer evening, sitting in the lush grass under big shade trees, listening to good local music.

The new ultra-modern dog park is a recent attraction, with about 500 members. Faile visited a number of other dog parks to incorporate the best features into a wonderful playground for canines and their two-footed friends. The lush landscaping includes a gazebo, walking trails, doggy art, and water fountains—with separate fenced areas for large and small dogs.

The Dairy Barn, another major attraction of The Greenway, is an upscale entertainment center for adults. The authentic barn, which originally housed a milking operation, now welcomes guests to weddings, parties, receptions, dinners and special entertainment. It is available for rent.

An active equestrian program with about 50 farm-owned horses has four components: summer camps, riding lessons, therapy sessions for handicapped children and adults, and the adopt-a-horse program. Outsiders can bring their own horses to explore the trails or opt for a guided trail ride. Another 50 or so horses are boarded on the property.

The Fall Frolic, held every weekend in October, attracts thousands of visitors. In addition to games, tractor rides to the pumpkin patch, corn and hay bale mazes and a horse show, the staff brings in a variety of popular attractions and food vendors.

"People come here for what they want to do," Faile summarized.

"Get to Know the Greenway" tours are offered periodically. For more information visit www.ascgreenway.org.

This swinging suspension bridge across a creek is a popular attraction at the Greenway. Director Buddy Faile demonstrates how to walk in sync with the movement of the bridge.

The Greenway can best be described as a 2,100-acre working landscape, explained manager Buddy Faile. It's a combination of a nature preserve and a farm, offering everything from peach orchards to fine quality produce, cattle and sheep. It also includes a restaurant, a fitness and recreation center, an upscale event venue, horses, swimming, mountain biking, camping, hiking, fishing, and just plain fun for the whole family.

"The Greenway turns the traditional notion of a greenway upside down," Faile said. Often thought of as linear green spaces, greenways are actually parcels of nature that offer respite from urban areas. Originally part of the Leroy Springs and Co. holdings, the ASC Greenway was established in 1995 by family member Anne Springs Close. The protected natural area is supported by memberships, program fees and donations, with an emphasis on recreation and family interaction.

"This property is almost a community within itself," Faile said. Its most visible attraction is a large SC Certified roadside market called The Peach Stand, which boasts a full service restaurant with down-home food. The store features a huge selection of fresh produce, homemade goods, baked, jarred and packaged foods, ice cream, milk, eggs, and fresh meat in its full-service butcher shop.

Their most popular item is raw milk, said store manager Sherri McMurray, who sells more than 400 gallons a week. "People also want grass-fed beef, pastured pork, raw buttermilk, and farm-raised fresh eggs. Our eggs sell so fast we can't keep them in."

Another popular attraction is the recreation complex. It bustles with kids running, laughing, and squirting each other with a water hose, with nary an adult voice raised in protest.

Another Commissioner's School in the Books

South Carolina Commissioner's School for Agriculture is a big part of our summer here at the Department of Agriculture. In its 13th year, Commissioner's School was held July 16 through 22. Along with Clemson University, we hosted 36 students from South Carolina, North Carolina, California and Pennsylvania.

Students in the Natural Resources academic area took to the woods to learn more about forest communities near Clemson.

More Counties Eligible for Farm Aid

Farmers in Cherokee, Pickens and Oconee counties are now eligible to apply for South Carolina Farm Aid grants to help offset losses due to the October 2015 flooding.

To be eligible for the grant, farmers must have:

- experienced a verifiable loss of affected agricultural commodities of at least 40 percent as a result of the October 2015 flooding,
- a farm located in a USDA disaster declared South Carolina county (every SC county except Jasper) and
- a United States Department of Agriculture-Farm Service Agency issued farm number.

Applicants will also be required to sign an affidavit, under penalty of perjury, certifying that loss information is accurate.

The deadline for farmers located in these three counties to apply is September 6. Farmers located in other eligible counties must apply by August 15.

For complete application instructions and to access the application PDF form, visit <http://agriculture.sc.gov/SC-farm-aid/>. For more information about Farm Aid or to be put in contact with Farm Aid staff, please call Megan Heidkamp with SCDA at 803-734-2210.

Ag Council to Learn about Farm Aid

The SC Agricultural Council's summer meeting will be Thursday, Aug. 11 at the SC Farm Bureau Office in Cayce.

The program features Chalmers Mikell of SC Farm Bureau, who will talk about the SC Farm Aid Fund that was established in response to the flooding in October. Then Ronnie Summers, SC regional president of AgSouth Farm Credit, will give an overview on the current financial situation of farmers in South Carolina.

Finally, Dr. Nathan Smith, Clemson University Extension Professor of Agribusiness Production at Sandhills Research and Education Center, will give a presentation on the outlook for agriculture in South Carolina.

Registration starts at 11 a.m., followed by a catered lunch at 11:30. The program will begin at noon. Deadline for advanced reservations of $10 for SCAC members is August 5. Registration at the door or for non-members is $15 per person.

For more information or to register contact Steve Slice at 803-777-2875.

Lee County Farm & Garden Market Opens

BISHOPVILLE--After a year in the planning stages, Lee County now has a Certified SC Grown Farmers Market. Representatives of city and county government, state officials, and federal agencies were on hand for the official opening of the Lee County Farm and Garden Market on July 22.

Margaret Copeland, center, chairman of the Lee County Chamber of Commerce, and Extension agent Joshua Caughman wielded the scissors at the grand opening ceremony.

The idea took root from a group of local citizens who wanted healthy fresh produce to be available to the community. Co-chairs of the project are Marian Major and Cindy Welsh; George Roberts is the market manager. Plans call for the market to expand throughout the fall.

"The market will be open every Friday and Saturday until November," said Ruby Gibbs, one of the key players in getting the project off the ground. "We'll take a break then and reopen in the spring." Hours are 8:30 until 3 on Fridays and 8:30 until 2 on Saturdays, "or until the vendors sell out," Mrs. Gibbs said. She encouraged the community to shop early for the best selection.

Despite the heat, shoppers thronged the stalls in the big airy shed, buying fresh fruits, vegetables and plants for the garden. The market currently has 11 vendors and is still accepting applications.

"My hearts swells with pride when I see this building being used," said Ann King, whose family owns the property. The shed which houses the produce was built in 1914. The adjacent warehouses, one of which is home to a large indoor flea market, was built by her husband, the late Brent King, to store cotton.

Membership in the Certified SC Grown program means more opportunities to reach consumers. "We're excited they decided to become Certified SC Grown members," said Ansley Rast, branding coordinator with the SC Department of Agriculture. "Membership in the program opens so many doors for farmers markets like this one."

markets and outdoor activities to encourage better health for all citizens. He said studies show that if you provide healthy fresh food, people will eat it. Cindy Welsh, a nutrition specialist with Clemson Extension, agreed saying "children gobble up fresh fruit when it's available."

Community-based farmers markets increase healthy food access all while supporting local farmers. The Healthy South Carolina Initiative provided funding for the market.

The Lee County Farm and Garden Center market is located at 220 E. Church St., Bishopville.

Our partnership with the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Life Sciences is certainly an important one, and we work closely together in this ongoing effort of engaging the future leaders of agriculture. SCCSA has had 428 graduates to date. Seventy-six percent of our graduates who are currently enrolled in college are studying agriculture, and of those that have graduated, 40 percent chose a career within the agricultural industry. This is the reason for the SCCSA, to get those bright minds into our industry. The weeklong summer program includes academic sessions with some fun mixed in. Students select a path of study from animal sciences, forestry, natural resources, or horticulture. During the week, they also have a chance to go white water rafting, tour the famous Death Valley, shoot sporting clays, and make Certified SC smoothies to cool off from the heat! One of my favorite events that these young adults take part in is the etiquette dinner that my wife, Blanche, organizes. The knowledge of proper etiquette and civility will forever be important in life. The Southern tradition of gentle manners must be handed down for generations to come. My message to them was that they will be representing someone or something in all occasions, and that we wanted them to think about the importance of presenting themselves well.

This year, we had a talented and diverse group of young adults eager to learn more about all that agriculture has to offer them. The students excelled in the classroom as well as in the team building activities and the daily fitness challenges. They were exposed to many aspects of agriculture and able to catch a glimpse of what the industry might hold for their future. They learned everything from the impacts of social media on agriculture, to packaging and analytics, to more about the athletic turf grass as they visit the Tiger's athletic fields, and even facts about the importance of bees!

I think it is truly phenomenal how we are able to teach a group of students from all over with very different backgrounds. While all of the students who attend Commissioners School have expressed an interest in agriculture, they don't all necessarily come from a farming background. They meet other young adults from around the country and have the chance to start making those important connections in life. As we wrap up our thirteenth annual Commissioners School, I could not be more proud of the students who are now graduates of the program, as well as staff members who poured their time and efforts into the week. I am personally very proud to be a part of this successful and meaningful program.

SC New and Beginning Farmer Program Accepting Applications

Farmers getting their feet wet in agribusiness have access to comprehensive education and business training through a program offered by Clemson University.

The South Carolina New and Beginning Farmer Program is now accepting applications for 2016-2017. This program focuses on enabling new and beginning farmers to be successful and productive members of their local community. They will gain knowledge and skills to help them become successful entrepreneurs, managers, and stewards of the environment.

Most importantly, the program seeks to develop individuals who have a sense of pride and enjoy a quality of life from agriculture. Dr. R. David Lamie with Clemson University Cooperative Extension has guided more than 200 emerging farmers through the program, which is now in its fifth year.

Two levels of instruction are offered: Level I, Exploring Farming as a Business for farmers with less than three years experience; and Level II, Taking Your Farm Business to the Next Level for those who have been farming up to nine years.

The core workshops in Columbia will focus on farm management. Topics include: business concept and plan development, financial and risk management, legal issues, marketing, and an introduction to additional resources.

Regional workshops offer opportunities for peer and resource networking, and topics will be tailored for each region. These sessions are a collaborative effort between Clemson Agribusiness, the Clemson Sustainable Agriculture Program, the SC Coastal Conservation League, the Catawba Farm & Food Coalition, and the Richland Soil & Water Conservation District.

Both Level I and Level II programming will begin this October. The deadline to apply is August 15. For details go to www.scnewfarmer.org.
