SC Watermelon Association Hosts Annual Meeting

By Stephanie Sox
Communications Director
SC Department of Agriculture

While sunny beach days spent enjoying summer's favorite treat are far from the thoughts of many during mid-January, South Carolina watermelon growers are making plans to once again deliver the juiciest, tastiest melons in the Southeast. Every January, the South Carolina Watermelon Association hosts its annual meeting in Columbia. With over 100 farmers, allied industry partners and researchers in attendance, excitement for the 2017 watermelon season is growing.

During the meeting, members took on the important business of raising money for research and crowning the South Carolina Watermelon Queen. Research funding is generated through a live auction. Farmers donate truckloads of watermelons, which are then sold to major retailers with the highest bid. This year, the live auction raised over $100,000.

The queen competition is far more than just a beauty pageant. This scholarship program affords the winner hands-on marketing experience as she serves as the spokesperson for the SC Watermelon Association. Contestants are ranked on their scores in public speaking, interview, promotion-wear, eveningwear, and of course, seed spitting. The queen will travel to state and national events promoting the health benefits and consumption of watermelon. The 2017 South Carolina Watermelon Queen is Blakely Johnson.

Miss Johnson is the 19-year old daughter of Brent and Dean Johnson of Denmark, SC and currently attends Clemson University where she is earning a degree in Agricultural Education. After graduation, Blakely plans to pursue her passion for agriculture in teaching young people about the industry.

"I have one word and that is 'passion,'" Johnson answered when asked why she would make the best spokesperson for the watermelon industry. "Passion for the industry and the people in it." Blakely comes from a family with strong ties to farming and agriculture and has interned with Dr. Gilbert Miller, lead watermelon researcher with Clemson Extension.

Dr. Miller focuses his research on variety trials at Edisto Research and Education Center in Blackville. Each year he plants over fifty varieties and shares his findings with farmers to help them identify watermelons that are best suited for growing in South Carolina. Miller also works with sensor-based irrigation technology, which applies the exact amount of water needed by the plant. Advancements like this help farmers continue to be good stewards of our natural resources.

Money raised through the live auction also goes to fund the SC Watermelon Association's promotions throughout the year. One of their signature campaigns is "Watermelon Fuels Athletes." This campaign shares the health benefits of choosing watermelon over sugary sports drinks to help refuel post-workout. Watermelon is naturally high in Vitamins A, B6 and C and is a great source of Potassium while being very low in Sodium. A two-cup serving contains just eighty calories and no fat!

As was the story in 2016 for many farmers, the flooding from the previous year impacted the watermelon crop. "After a challenging year last year, farmers are hopeful for a more fruitful harvest in 2017," said Matt Cornwell, South Carolina Department of Agriculture marketing specialist.

South Carolina is home to around ten commercial watermelon growers and packers, but there are more than 530 Certified SC Grown watermelon farms in the state. In 2015, they grew and sold over 75 million pounds of watermelon. On average, South Carolinians consume about ten pounds of watermelon a year. Grown commercially in eight counties, watermelons generate approximately $18 million in revenue each year in South Carolina. South Carolina is in the top five watermelon producers in the country.

SC Commissioner's School Applications Now Available

Rising high school juniors and seniors can now apply for this year's South Carolina Commissioner's School for Agriculture (SCCSA), held at Clemson University, July 22-28.

SCCSA is a premier summer academic program coordinated by the South Carolina Department of Agriculture (SCDA) and Clemson University's College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences. Students are exposed to academic offerings and potential careers in agriculture and natural resources through workshops, field studies, and laboratories.

The program covers broad topics in agriculture as well as emphasis areas for technical and career specific information. The school also includes trips to Clemson University

Research Farms and Experimental Forest, a whitewater rafting trip down the Chattooga River, and a Certified SC Farm to Table dinner.

The SC Commissioner's School for Agriculture is in its 14th year and has graduated 465 students from the program. Of our alumni, 76% are currently studying or studied agriculture in college and 40% are working in an agriculture field.

Applications are available online at clemson.edu/cafls/sccsa and must be post marked by March 31, 2017. For information about SCCSA, contact Clemson's Katie Black at 864-656-6662 or hulse@clemson.edu, or SCDA's Elizabeth Wood at 803-734-0328 or ewood@scda.sc.gov.

Perdue Named Secretary of Agriculture

What seemed to be like a carousel turning around and around with regards to naming someone to lead the agricultural industry finally came to a stop when former Georgia Governor Sonny Perdue was picked by the President as United States Secretary of Agriculture. Prior to being nominated for this office, Governor Perdue served on President Trump's agricultural advisory team. I have had the privilege of knowing Sonny for several years now, and I believe him to be an excellent choice for this office.

There have been 30 Secretaries of Agriculture since 1889 when the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) was founded, and though some were raised on a farm, only two actually lived and worked in agriculture as adults. Once confirmed, Sonny Perdue will be number three. He grew up on a farm in Perry, GA and is formally trained as a veterinarian. He has been involved in several agribusinesses in his career, from grain to eggs, fertilizer and exports. He also has several agribusiness operations in South Carolina.

Perdue served two terms as Governor of Georgia from 2003 to 2011, and during his tenure, he succeeded in returning agriculture to the centerpiece of the Georgia economy. Notably during his term as governor, amidst the historic drought of 2007,

he held a rally on the State House steps to pray for rain. As the story goes, just 24 hours later, rain fell in Georgia.

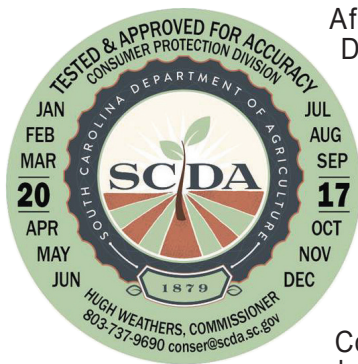

Once, toward the end of Sonny's second term as Governor, Blanche and I had the privilege of attending a function at the Governor's mansion. Sonny and his wife Mary were great hosts. They said they had enjoyed their time in Atlanta, but were looking forward to more time with their grandchildren.

Sonny's experience with international exports affords him the perspective to understand the value of a sound trade policy and how that policy directly affects farmers. He will be an advocate for a trade plan that will be positive for the agricultural industry. Additionally, he will have an understanding of the production challenges Southern farmers deal with.

Perdue has much respect and support from within the agricultural community and has been regarded as a strong administrator and also as someone who can work across the aisle to build necessary coalitions to pass often-divisive legislation like a farm bill. Sonny was one of the few candidates for Secretary with experience running a large organization such as USDA, which has more than 100,000 workers in the nation's capital area and around the country.

As we've discussed many times, the political climate is changing and there will be challenges for farmers moving forward. The 2018 Farm Bill, regulatory environment and labor will certainly be high on the list of priorities for Secretary Perdue. I think there's value in diverse perspectives at the United States Department of Agriculture. I am confident that Sonny Perdue will build an effective leadership team at USDA that reflects the diversity that is American agriculture.

SCDA Gas Pump Stickers Get a New Look

After seeing the Florida Department of Agriculture's gas pump inspection stickers, Commissioner Weathers decided it was time to give South Carolina's stickers a makeover. The new stickers incorporate the SCDA logo in the center and match the style of other SCDA publications. Assistant Commissioner Derek Underwood and Consumer Services Director John Stokes with the Consumer Protection Division drafted five versions before deciding on the newest inspection sticker.

The new stickers were deployed starting January 1 of this year. The registration stickers for Food and Feed Safety were also revamped to be more consistent with the gas stickers. Inspectors will write the issuing date and Registration Verification Certificate (RVC) number on these stickers before issuing them to companies to publically display. Be sure to look for the new stickers at gas pumps, grocery store scales and businesses you shop in.

SCDA to Host Farmers Market Nutrition Program Training

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture will host Farmers Market Nutrition Program Training at four locations around the state. The FMNP allows farmers to accept SC FMNP checks and WIC Cash Value Vouchers.

The training will include rules and regulations of each program including allowable fruits and vegetables, authorized locations and banking information.

Attendees will be provided information from the 2017 Guidebook for Farmers and will be required to complete and turn in an application and agreement that includes a crop plan for the year. Representatives from DHEC, DSS and SCDA will be on hand to answer questions.

Training Schedule:

February 7 – Greenwood Municipal Building
520 Monument Street
Greenwood, SC

February 9 – Chester Market Building
116 Columbia Street
Chester, SC

February 21 – Historic Bean Market
111 Henry Street
Lake City, SC

February 23 – State Farmers Market
Phillips Market Center
3483 Charleston Highway
West Columbia, SC

All sessions begin at 10:00 a.m. and end at 12:00 p.m.

Training is only required for new farmers who wish to participate in FMNP and farmers who received a violation in 2016. Please contact SCDA at 803-734-2210 to register. For more information, please visit agriculture.sc.gov.

Agritourism Event

Saturday Beer Tastings
February, 4th, 11th, 18th, 25th
12 – 5pm

We are a locally owned and operated craft beer producer. Located in Lancaster, SC. Benford brewing is South Carolina's first operating agricultural brewery in the state. Our beers are brewed in 30 barrel batches on a small farm. Our land is fortunate to have a pure well water source tapped into the water table of three known springs located on premises. This natural gift gives us great tasting pure and healthy drinking water and is the key to brewing great beers. Our beers are brewed with only natural based ingredients staying true to brewing traditions.

All-Star Pork Meatballs

Prep time 15 minutes
Cook time 30 minutes

1 pound ground pork
1 tablespoon onion flakes
3/4 cup corn flakes, crushed
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 egg
1/4 cup ketchup
3 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard

Heat oven to 375 degrees F. In a large bowl, combine ground pork, onion flakes, corn flakes, salt, pepper and egg. In a small bowl stir together ketchup, brown sugar and dry mustard. Spoon 2 tablespoons of the ketchup mixture into the pork and mix well. Spray muffin tin with vegetable cooking spray. Form 6 meatballs and place in muffin tin. Coat the top of each meatball with the remaining ketchup mixture. Bake for 30 minutes at 375 degrees F., until nicely glazed and internal temperature is 160 degrees F. Serves 6.
