Timber is No. 1 crop & No. 1 exported commodity

By Marsha Hewitt
Editor, SC Market Bulletin

The forest industry produces not only the most valuable commodity in the state, but it is also one of the least known and appreciated. Despite budget and staff cutbacks, the SC Forestry Commission has been managing one of the most efficient agencies in the state for the past 90 years.

S.C. State Forester Gene Kodama presented an overview of the forest industry to the SC Agriculture Commission at its August meeting. With forests covering two thirds of the state, timber is the state's number one harvested crop and its number one exported commodity, Kodama said.

"Forestry has a $21 billion economic impact on the state," he told the group. The head of the agency shared a number of interesting facts with the commission.

The agency's five state forests – Sandhills, Manchester, Poe Creek, Wee Tee and Harbison —encompass 94,000 acres. Not many people realize that 25 percent of the revenue from those forests goes to the school districts in their counties of origin, Kodama explained. The Commission is the only agency to do so, providing about $700,000 annually.

But 87 percent of the state's forests--13 million acres--are in private hands. Fortunately, growth greatly outweighs harvest, so the industry has a bright future for its 207,000 landowners and 84,000 workers. Agency staff assist landowners with management, protection, resource development, information and education for forests across the state.

SC State Forester Gene Kodama

In addition to offering management advice, the agency protects the forests from insects, disease, and fire. Resource development includes forest inventories, water quality protection, and seedlings for reforestation.

The agency's incident management team deals with everything from forest fires to flooding, ice storms, and hurricanes. "We have the only Type II Incident Management Team in the state," Kodama said, explaining that these highly trained employees can respond quickly to any emergency, in or out of state. One example he gave was fighting the 2016 Pinnacle Mountain fire in the Upstate, which burned 10,600 acres over 27 days.

"Bulldozers could not operate in much of the mountains," he said, "so hand crews and helicopter water drops were needed. The biggest accomplishment was no loss of life or property. It took 38 days to control the fire, but there was no loss of life." Similarly, the team assisted with evacuation and recovery from Hurricanes Joaquin and Matthew, plus other natural disasters like ice storms and flooding.

The agency currently has 365 full time employees, fewer than it had 10 years ago. Since 2012, it had been able to replace aging bulldozers with the newer models essential for the safety of the employees. But their budget for 2018 is significantly less than it was 10 years ago.

Sonny in SC

That's not a typo about the weather. It was an honor to host my friend Sonny Perdue, the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, in our home last month! When I learned that Secretary Perdue was coming to Charleston for the eclipse, Blanche and I--like any South Carolinians would do--invited him to stay the night with us. When his staff realized there were "no rooms in the inn" due to the eclipse, they accepted our hospitality.

We have known Sonny since he was governor of Georgia, and I have been in several meetings with him recently. It was special to have a relaxed Sunday afternoon chat with him, both as my friend, as well as the most important friend our farmers have in Washington. A neighbor dairy farmer stopped by to meet the Secretary, and the three of us compared dairy stories.

Blanche went all out for supper, and Sonny really enjoyed her cooking. She served caprese salads, steaks, and roasted Brussel sprouts and her famous rhubarb pie for dessert. What a hit! We had some nearby SC business friends of Sonny's join us for a very relaxing evening.

Monday morning was time for the Secretary to go to work. We were delighted that nearly 200 farmers and others representing all aspects of agriculture took part in a Farmer Listening Forum held in the yard. Prior to meeting with the full group assembled,

Forestry

The most positive story for forestry is the "wall of wood" now available for harvesting that resulted from reforestation after Hurricane Hugo and federal government planting programs. This surplus of timber is now being harvested.

Best of all, the future for forestry is bright. Kodama encouraged landowners to think of timber as a cash crop. While timber takes longer to harvest than row crops, an advantage is a one-time planting cost versus annual cash and labor outlays for most farm commodities. Pine timber should be thinned at 10 to 15 years to bring in early revenue, thinned again, then harvested at about 25 years and reforested.

Planting harvested areas greatly increases returns on investment. "In rough figures, natural regeneration produces about $20 per acre, but managed planted timber can produce $200 or more an acre annually," the state forester said.

Demand for timber is increasing, and so are the numbers of wood consumption and mills in South Carolina. With 98 primary mills and 746 secondary mills, the industry is healthy and poised for even more economic growth and job creation over the next few years.

Fall Plant and Flower Festivals Coming Soon

Every year the SC Department of Agriculture sponsors three Plant and Flower Festivals in the fall. Home owners can buy from a variety of plant and flower vendors and pick up great yard décor and seasonal decorations.

Consumers all over the state are encouraged to spruce up their yards for autumn, while supporting locally grown plants, produce, and vendors. Many handmade crafts, as well as SC Specialty Foods, will be available at all three flower festivals.

SC Fall Pecan Meeting Offers Orchard Tours

Pecan growers can tour two orchards on Sept. 14 at the fall meeting of the SC Pecan Growers Association. The meeting begins at 10 a.m. at Harmony Hills Orchard, 143 or 133 Semm Sease Road, in Gilbert.

The morning session will feature Dr. Lenny Wells, University of Georgia Pecan Extension Specialist. He will be scouting the orchard, pointing out potential disease and insect problems and other concerns. The orchard is approximately 30 acres, with a mixture of varieties. In 2015 an early snow storm affected the orchard, causing major limb damage. The walk and talk Tour will last until 11:30.

Lunch will be served at noon at Gilbert Community Park on Rikard Circle. A tour of Harmony Hills Orchard at 2070 Boyd Miller Circle in Leesville will last from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Dr. Wells and owner Tom Harmony will guide the tour. This young pecan orchard is the newest addition to Harmony Hills. Discussion will focus on advantages and disadvantages of varieties and other challenges at this location.

The fee for the day is $25, which includes lunch. For additional information contact Mark Arena, Senior Extension Agent for Statewide Specialty Crops at Anderson County Extension Service, at 864.359.3387 or marena@clermson.edu.

'Growing Stronger Together' Theme of Farm to Institution

S.C. Farm to Institution, in partnership with the S.C. Department of Health & Environmental Control's Division of Diabetes, Heart Disease, and School Health, will be hosting its first summit on Tuesday, Sept. 19. This year's theme is Growing Stronger Together.

The purpose of the summit is to bring together key farm to institution players to encourage local procurement, reinforce healthy food education, and provide the skills to establish a garden, farmers' market or community supported agriculture program.

The day will begin with an overview of both the SC Farm to Institution and the Diabetes Prevention programs. The keynote speaker will be Anupama Joshi, the executive director of the National Farm to School Network.

Two breakout sessions will be specific to educators, producers, worksites, food distributors, and Diabetes Prevention Program sites. The afternoon session will include regional networking.

The summit will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sept. 19 at the R2i2 Conference Center, 763 Fashion Drive, Columbia. Registration is $10 and includes a local lunch. Participants are encouraged to bring a healthy canned food item for a food bank.

For more information, including workshop descriptions and how to register, visit the South Carolina Farm to Institution website (<http://scfarmtoinstitution.com/media/summit>).

the Secretary had a great exchange with some young farmers from the surrounding counties. The Pelion FFA Chapter attended and was able to help out with directing traffic and leading the group in the Pledge of Allegiance.

One of the first topics touched on was NAFTA. The Secretary told the group that he will take our concerns back to Washington. He has already influenced President Trump on NAFTA, so that farmers won't be harmed by the revisions to the North American Free Trade Agreement.

In his remarks, Secretary Perdue encouraged our farmers to speak up, speak often, and speak loud. He hit home when he commented that sometimes help from the federal government means "just don't hurt us too bad." He said he was in South Carolina—one of 25 states he is visiting before Labor Day—to learn from farmers. He's going out in the real world to talk to real farmers and real producers.

Especially welcome were the comments from the young farmers, with 15 or so farmers speaking directly with Secretary Perdue regarding their concerns.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue spoke with several groups of farmers at the home of Hugh Weathers recently, where they discussed a number of issues.

Labor was one of the topics that came up. Farmers who grow beans and okra as a handpicked crop wanted to know how they can expand their business if they don't have the labor.

Questions from folks ranged from NAFTA to markets, USDA crop reports and disaster payments, to forestry and timber. Perdue assured everyone that the 2018 farm bill will continue to offer safety nets for farmers via the crop insurance programs. Disaster assistance will probably be more on a regional level than in the past.

Interestingly, he referred to timber as an untapped resource, even though we know it is a most valuable commodity in South Carolina. Nationwide, the country is not cutting timber like it should, he said. He wants to get millions of acres of U.S. forest working again.

Most important, Secretary Perdue gave us an opportunity to be heard. After he left my house, he went to Charleston to tour the U.S. Vegetable Lab, and then he had a chance to watch the solar eclipse in McClellanville at Francis Marion National Park.

It was a great day for agriculture in South Carolina and for me personally.

RECIPE CORNER

Featuring Certified SC Products

Boiled Peanut Hummus

Ingredients:

- 1 cup shelled Certified SC Grown boiled peanuts
- 2 tbsp. chopped cilantro
- 2 tbsp. lime juice
- 2 tbsp. peanut butter
- 1 ½ tsp. hot sauce
- 1 tsp. minced garlic
- ¼ tsp. ground cumin
- 2 tbsp. olive oil
- 1 tbsp. toasted sesame seeds

Directions:

Process the first seven ingredients in a food processor until coarsely chopped, stopping to scrape down the sides. With processor running, pour olive oil through food chute in a slow, steady stream, processing until mixture is smooth.

Stir in up to 5 tablespoons of water, 1 tablespoon at a time, for desired consistency. Stir in sesame seeds. Serve with pita chips, pretzels, and vegetables.

Sustainable Midlands to Tour 10 Farms

Sustainable Midlands is hosting a farm tour in Richland and Lexington counties from 11 a.m. - 6 p.m. on Sept. 9.

This exclusive tour will offer a behind-the-scenes look at the inner workings of up to 10 sustainable farms. This year promises a unique experience with the inclusion of niche products like indigo and chestnuts, as well as a range of interesting farming practices.

Some of these include aquaponics, experimental heirloom cultivation, and hyperlocal wine production.

Farms utilizing the "360 method" of composting, rainwater harvesting, and the use of alternative energy sources will be explored.

The participating farms are: Carolina Bay Farms, Fire Barrel Farm, The Winery at Mercer House, Up On Cedar Knoll, Leesville Aquaponics, Terra Kotta Farm, Meador Acres Chestnuts, Arnold Farm, Doko Farm, and Six Berry Farm. The tour connects consumers with local producers practicing farm stewardship and sustainability.

Ticket prices are $10, which guarantees access to all farms on the tour. Children under the age of 10, and WIC, SNAP, and EBT beneficiaries are admitted free of charge with proof of eligibility.
