

HOW TO FIND LOCAL MEAT IN SOUTH CAROLINA

UPDATED MAY 18, 2020

Some Americans are having a harder time finding meat. As major processing facilities work to get back up and running, less beef and pork is reaching grocery stores and food service establishments.

The issue should be resolved soon. With major processors reopening, the supply of meat for consumers will likely rebound within the next few weeks.

You can buy meat from local farmers and processors. Many South Carolina businesses sell meat directly to consumers. We've collected some of them here. For a thorough list of farms and markets selling produce, proteins, dairy, and more direct to the public during COVID-19, visit agriculture.sc.gov/coronavirus/local. Questions?
