AG + ART HIGHLIGHTS RICHLAND COUNTY FARMS

BY SAMANTHA DAY

Have you ever wanted to practice your yoga moves surrounded by goats, watch chickens race, build your own birdhouse, or pick your own produce straight from the source? All that and more was offered during the weekend of June 12 when Richland County hosted the annual Ag + Art Tour.

The South Carolina Ag + Art Tour is a free, self-guided tour of different farms and farmers markets scattered throughout South Carolina's counties. The tour is coordinated by leadership and county-level planning teams that are led by Clemson University Cooperative Extension. Since 2012, the Ag + Art Tour has continued to grow in South Carolina, adding new participating counties every year.

During the Richland County weekend, 11 farms and seven markets participated from Winnsboro and Blythewood all the way to Hopkins and Eastover. Richland County saw more than 2,300 visitors throughout their farms on Saturday and Sunday, leading to a 55% increase in the number of farm visitors from the 2019 Ag + Art Tour.

Tennyson Corley from Tennyson Corley Art is a Columbia native who uses her environmental surroundings and travels as inspiration for her multimedia works of art.

Eastover community members got to pick squash and zucchini straight from the garden.

Most farms feature local artisans selling their handmade goods, kid-friendly activities, opportunities to purchase produce straight from the farm, and tours to allow children and adults to see exactly where their food comes from. The overall goal of this annual event is to allow South Carolinians the opportunity to learn more about rural life in the state and get to know the amazing individuals behind its number one industry, agriculture.

Mill Creek Greenhouses

Each stop on the tour provided opportunities for participants to learn more about local farms and agriculture, all while enjoying unique experiences. Mill Creek Greenhouses, for example, housed the Saluda River Band, allowing visitors to browse plants to the sound of early Americana and folk music.

Some local artists, like Carolina McKay, offered live demonstrations of their craft. Stationed at Doko Farms, she hosted interactive soft pastel sessions for farm visitors.

Over at Purple Tuteur Farm, visitors were able to watch Nancy Hubbard put oil paint to canvas, see Emily Dent from Muddy Waters Pottery perform demonstrations on the potter's wheel, and pick out fresh cut-from-the-farm flowers.

Fabel Farms was home to the "It's a Matter of Taste" food truck for the weekend. There, Dupre's Catering whipped up some delicious Southern favorites with ingredients straight from the farm.

Fox Hideaway Farm in Eastover is the home to many varieties of farm animals. Most notable though is their mini hinny, a mix between a miniature horse and donkey. They also allowed visitors to play in a baby goat playpen and participate in a goat yoga class.

No matter which county or farm you visited, the Ag + Art tour had a lot to offer South Carolinians. If you missed out, the annual Ag + Art Tour will be back for weekends in May and June of 2022.

INDEPENDENCE...AND SC WATERMELON

Seems like we're all getting back to going 100 miles an hour with meetings now in person rather than virtual. The summer harvest season is going well, fall row crops are growing strong, and things are getting back to some kind of normal as we emerge from the pandemic. Given all the activity, I'm looking forward to the Fourth of July and the chance to spend some down time with my family.

This holiday is not just a time to relax, though. It's a time to reflect on the privilege that it is to be an American, and what it took for our country to emerge from just being a colony. I will dedicate some time to honoring the great sacrifices made on our behalf, and the great ideas that formed the foundation of this country. Let's all try to live up to those ideas. It's good to hear that fireworks are planned for the Fourth around the country.

Independence Day is also a time that Certified South Carolina produce gets into full swing. And for Fourth of July, there's no more classic food than watermelon.

More than 600 farms in South Carolina grow this beloved fruit. While watermelon is grown in most counties in the state, Bamberg County has the most watermelon acreage. As of the most recent Census of Agriculture, South Carolina produced more than 2 million hundredweight of watermelons, worth more than $26 million.

Selecting the perfect watermelon is a bit of an art and a bit of a science. According to the South Carolina Watermelon Association, here are some signs a melon is ripe:

- A pale yellow underside
- A brown melon tendril
- A break-up of green bands at the blossom end
- Development of ribbed indentations that can be felt with the fingertips
- A change in sound when thumped (from a metallic ringing sound to a soft hollow sound)

Hope you pick a good one!
Happy Independence Day.

Hugh Weathers

UPCOMING EVENTS

Purple Martins at Lake Murray

July 5 – August 27 • 7 pm

One of the most exciting adventures is to witness the Purple Martin sanctuary on Bomb Island that only happens a few months a year. # CLEMSON IPM NEWSLETTER KEEPS GROWERS PEST-INFORMED

BY DENISE ATTAWAY, CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

FLORENCE, S.C. – Environmental concerns and insect resistance to pesticide use led to the adoption of a new approach to pest control — Integrated Pest Management (IPM) — in the 1970s.

Some 50 years later, Clemson University researchers are still encouraging growers to use IPM strategies to control insects, pathogens, nematodes, and weeds. Now an email newsletter has been created to encourage adoption of IPM practices in South Carolina.

IPM is a pest management approach that minimizes economic, environmental and health risks. It is conducted by using a variety of methods including biological, cultural, and chemical strategies to control pests. Information from the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) shows that in IPM methods, pesticides are used in combination with other crop management approaches to minimize the impacts of pests while maintaining healthy and profitable crops. IPM principles can be applied to any pest of food or fiber production systems, landscapes, and urban environments.

Francis Reay-Jones, Clemson IPM coordinator at the Pee Dee Research and Education Center (REC), oversees a statewide research-based Cooperative Extension Service IPM Program.

“The overarching goal of this program is to increase adoption of cost-effective and environmentally sound IPM practices to provide long-term solutions to critical pest management challenges,” Reay-Jones said. “Through this program, we are teaching producers and pest managers how to effectively use IPM practices to control pests while minimizing risks to the environment and to people, and reducing the evolution of resistance to pesticides.”

The newsletter is available under “News” on the Clemson Integrated Pest Management website: clemson.edu/extension/ipm. Tim Bryant, assistant coordinator for the Clemson IPM Program, said the newsletter highlights IPM-based Extension work throughout South Carolina.

“We are planning to update the newsletter once a month,” Bryant said. “We will include information from specialists and agents related to pest issues they are seeing in the field.”

Information found in the June newsletter includes an article on Fungicide Programs for Downy Mildew Management in Cucumbers by Tony Keinath, Clemson Extension vegetable pathologist at the Coastal REC in Charleston. Mike Marshall, Clemson Extension weed specialist at the Edisto REC, provides information about Weed Suppression Using Cover Crops and Lexington County agent Justin Ballew addresses the Efficacy of Insecticides for Diamondback Moth Caterpillars in Brassicas.

Clemson University researchers have created an email newsletter to encourage adoption of IPM practices in South Carolina to control pests such as corn earworm.

The newsletter also includes a link to the Clemson Extension Land-Grant Press article, Biological Control Strategies in Integrated Pest Management Programs, written by Drew Jeffers, Spartanburg County coordinator and Horticulture and Natural Resources agent, and J.C. Chong, an entomologist at the Pee Dee REC.

In addition to appearing on the Clemson Integrated Pest Management website, the newsletter also can be emailed. Subscription is free. For more information, or to be included on the newsletter email list, contact Tim Bryant at timb@clemson.edu.

NORTHWEST GRAINS INTERNATIONAL, LLC BREAKS GROUND ON AGRICULTURAL TRANSLOAD FACILITY IN DILLON COUNTY

INLAND PORT DILLON PROVIDES FARMERS WITH ACCESS TO GLOBAL MARKETS

BY SOUTH CAROLINA PORTS AUTHORITY

DILLON, SC — JUNE 11, 2021 — South Carolina Ports welcomes customer Northwest Grains International, LLC to Inland Port Dillon and Dillon County, S.C.

Northwest Grains International, LLC is breaking ground on an agricultural transload operation in Dillon County to serve agricultural producers. The operation will handle containerized soybeans, lumber, logs, peanuts, cotton, cotton seed and yellow peas for export through the Port of Charleston via rail-served Inland Port Dillon.

The new transload operation sits next to Inland Port Dillon. Northwest Grains will load crops into containers at its site, and the containers will then be loaded onto CSX trains at Inland Port Dillon to be efficiently delivered to the Port of Charleston for export to overseas markets.

This investment will provide farmers in the Pee Dee region, as well as farmers throughout South Carolina and North Carolina, better access to global markets.

“We are excited to welcome Northwest Grains International, LLC to South Carolina Ports,” SC Ports President and CEO Jim Newsome said. “The company’s decision to invest in Dillon County and use Inland Port Dillon will further support farmers and agricultural business across the Carolinas. We are proud to play a role in supporting agriculture export growth in the Southeast.”

Construction on the site began this month. The operation is scheduled to open in late October, in time for soybean season. The $2.5 million investment will create five to 10 jobs.

“We found a great partner in South Carolina Ports, which shares in our commitment of providing excellent service and reliable shipping,” said Gary Mao, the founder and president of Northwest Grains International, LLC. “Our investment in Dillon County and partnership with SC Ports will enable us to support U.S. farmers by exporting containerized agricultural products. We look forward to our future growth in South Carolina.”

This operation will offer exporters greater access to containers, as well as provide faster turnaround times for ocean carriers’ containers. SC Ports anticipates handling 1,000 containers through the facility each year.

“This new facility will support the regional agricultural economy by reducing supply chain costs and swiftly exporting products for farmers,” SC Ports Chief Operating Officer Barbara Melvin said. “Our team is proud that our efficient operations will directly benefit farmers throughout the Carolinas.”

SC Ports opened Inland Port Dillon in 2018 to provide direct rail access to the Port of Charleston. The inland port enables customers in the Southeast to quickly receive imports and move exports. Port operations generate a $7.1 billion economic impact in the Pee Dee region each year, according to an economic impact study.

NOTABLE QUOTES

“Northwest Grains International, LLC’s investment into an agricultural transload operation in Dillon County will create jobs and supports farmers throughout South Carolina and beyond. SC Ports’ well-run Inland Port Dillon continues to bring growth to the Pee Dee region by creating a direct connection to the Port of Charleston for our businesses.” — Senator Kent Williams

“We are excited to welcome Northwest Grains International, LLC to Dillon County. This operation will support soybean farmers and other agricultural businesses in our state, thanks in large part to SC Ports’ rail-served Inland Port Dillon and efficient port operations.” — Rep. (Coach) Jackie Hayes

“Northwest Grains International, LLC’s new agricultural transload operation is a great example of how Inland Port Dillon is creating opportunities for farmers to grow their businesses. Inland Port Dillon’s rail capabilities and South Carolina Ports’ connection to global markets are helping grow South Carolina agriculture exports and keep our agribusiness industry strong.” — South Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers

“Dillon County Council welcomes Northwest Grains International, LLC to our community. This agricultural transload facility will support agricultural producers in our region and create jobs for our citizens. Inland Port Dillon played a huge role in attracting the company here, and this partnership will yield economic benefits to the Pee Dee region for many years.” — Dillon County Council Chairman T.F. “Buzzy” Finklea

“Dillon County offers many great assets to businesses looking to locate in South Carolina, such as our rail-served inland port, which provides a direct connection to the Port of Charleston. Northwest Grains International, LLC showcases the tremendous opportunities found in Dillon County. We look forward to seeing this company launch operations in support of our farmers.” — Dillon County Administrator and Economic Development Director Clay Young

ABOUT NORTHWEST GRAINS INTERNATIONAL, LLC

Northwest Grains International, LLC was founded by Gary Mao. Northwest Grains has grown considerably since, with the goal of being the largest exporter of containerized agricultural products in the U.S. The company has created a network of dedicated transloaders and direct ocean carrier contracts to facilitate the growth of the business and to serve its customers better. By utilizing an efficient and integrated procurement and logistics process, the company is able to deliver competitively priced products to each customer it serves. The company has focused on sourcing only the highest quality products from the best production areas in the country.

ABOUT SOUTH CAROLINA PORTS AUTHORITY

South Carolina Ports Authority, established by the state’s General Assembly in 1942, owns and operates public seaport and intermodal facilities in Charleston, Dillon, Georgetown and Greer. As an economic development engine for the state, Port operations facilitate 225,000 statewide jobs and generate nearly $63.4 billion in annual economic activity. # UPSTATE AGRITOURISM FARMS WELCOME SCDA STAFF

BY SAMANTHA DAY, SCDA COMMUNICATIONS INTERN

On the morning of June 10, staff from the South Carolina Department of Agriculture (SCDA) headed out to put faces to names and make meaningful connections with South Carolina farmers. The overnight trip brought staff from SCDA's Agribusiness Center for Research and Entrepreneurship (ACRE) and the SC Specialty Crop Growers Association (SCSCGA) to the Upstate of South Carolina to visit Chattooga Belle Farms in Long Creek, Lover Farms in Easley, and Twin Creeks Lavender Farm in Williamston.

The first stop, Chattooga Belle Farms, is essentially an all-in-one farm that features a breathtaking event venue, a Certified SC distillery, an on-premise restaurant named Belle's Bistro, a farm store stocked with local produce and goods, along with muscadine and grape vineyards and peach and apple orchards that line the Blue Ridge Mountains. They are the epitome of what it means to be an agritourism farm. Chattooga Belle is an established farm, with memberships in SC Farm to School, Certified SC, and the SC Agritourism Association. Discussions with farmer and owner Ed Land were held about becoming a member of the SC Specialty Crop Growers Association and how the South Carolina Department of Agriculture can help Chattooga Belle's produce reach wholesale and retail markets.

SCSCGA acts as the voice for the specialty crop industry through the state and federal governments. Members also receive education through regional grower meetings and workshops, and the opportunity to apply for mini grants only opened to SCSCGA members.

The next stop took the SCDA team to Easley, where they visited owner Brittany Arsiniega and farmer Emily at Lover Farms. They were greeted by a herd of friendly rescue farm animals that included fluffy sheep, two calves, donkeys, a beautiful horse, a mischievous goat named Flower, a mess of chickens, and the nicest pigs. During their tour on Lover Farms' seven acres of land, the SCDA team was able to taste test edible flowers and honey straight from the hive, visit raised beds where they currently grow zucchini, tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, and other vegetables for their monthly Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) boxes, as well as discuss plans for expanding the farm's current produce production.

Team members provided information about different associations, certifications, and cost share programs offered through SCDA. Most notable to Lover Farms were Good Agricultural Practices (GAP) Certification, Organic Certification reimbursements, and a Cold Storage Cost Share grant available to SCSCGA members. This grant reimburses farmers up to $750 for installing a Cool-Bot cooler system that essentially turns any room into cold storage.

Bright and early the next morning the SCDA traveled to Williamston in Anderson County. They were greeted by an immediate smell of lavender followed by the view of the three acres of purple fields at Twin Creeks Lavender Farm. Michelle Ducworth, owner, greeted the team at her newest addition to the farm, the drying and production barn. Here, customers can shop for homemade lavender products after cutting their own bouquet of fresh lavender. While customers browse, they can also see the drying process happening in the back room.

The reason for the visit was to see how Twin Creeks had utilized the 2020 Advanced Award they received from the Agribusiness Center for Research and Entrepreneurship grant competition. The ACRE funding that was received by Ducworth has helped alleviate parts of the expenses from their newest drying and production barn.

Overall, the two-day trip for the ACRE and Specialty Crop Association teams was full of learning opportunities. Getting out in the field and making sure local farmers know about the services and opportunities that are available to them helps fulfill the SCDA's mission of promoting, growing, and developing South Carolina's agriculture industry. It is important to make these meaningful connections with the farmers who make South Carolina's number one industry thrive.

Pictured are the SCDA staff from the Agribusiness Center for Research and Entrepreneurship and the SC Specialty Crop Growers Association.

Chattooga Belle Farms in Long Creek offers a breathtaking view of their muscadine and grape vineyards outlined by the Blue Ridge Mountains.

When you're not petting the friendliest farm animals, Lover Farms offers a variety of activities on their seven acres of land.

Twin Creeks Lavender Farm in Williamston offered the SCDA staff a unique opportunity to pick their own lavender bundles.
