3RD ANNUAL CERTIFIED SC SHOWCASE SUPPORTS PRODUCERS, NURTURES CONVERSATIONS

BY EVA MOORE

This year's Certified SC Showcase brought together South Carolina producers and buyers for a day of education and networking in Columbia.

Held at the Columbia Metropolitan Convention Center for the third straight year, the March 21 event was an opportunity for face-to-face conversations, product sampling, and learning. The event also highlighted the importance of the Certified South Carolina branding program and related marketing.

There were more than 360 attendees this year across all Showcase events, 50 of which were exhibitors. Those exhibiting at the Showcase included farms, specialty food producers, and resource providers.

Sessions held during the morning included a presentation on grants and other resources available for farmers and agribusinesses in South Carolina; and a talk on the South Carolina Department of Agriculture taking over food safety activities from DHEC on July 1, 2024. There was also a panel discussion featuring a range of buyers, including a large grocery chain produce buyer, a school district food service manager, a wholesaler, a food hub, a chef and restaurant owner, and a Local Food Purchase Agreement aggregator.

Commissioner Hugh Weathers spoke during lunch, giving an update on South Carolina agriculture.

The Taste of South Carolina, held the evening before the Showcase, was a success in its own right. Sponsored by AgSouth Farm Credit and ArborOne, the event brings together people from across the agribusiness community for conversations and networking. The Taste first began as part of the SC Agribiz and Farm Expo held in Florence, and has found new life as part of the Showcase.

The Taste was held at the University of South Carolina Alumni Center for the first time. The menu showcases Certified South Carolina ingredients, with featured farms including Manchester Quail, Cottle Farms, Titan Farms, and Brown Farm.

Keep an eye on SCDA social media and agriculture.scdadepartmentofagriculture.com/showcase for information on next year's Showcase.

TEXAS WILDFIRE RELIEF

The recent wildfires must have felt like a nightmare for the ranchers and farmers of the Texas Panhandle. Starting on February 26, fires raged across the area for more than a week. While the fires are contained as of now, more than 1.2 million acres were burned, and thousands of livestock died.

For the surviving livestock, there's very little useable pasture left. My counterpart in Texas, Commissioner Sid Miller, reports that over 85% of the state's cattle population is located on ranches in the Panhandle — and we all know that Texas has a lot of cattle. This is a dire situation for those producers and their livestock.

Our department is working with South Carolina Farm Bureau, Clemson Extension Livestock and Forages, and the South Carolina Cattlemen's Association to organize hay donations to help the Texas ag community. You can help with the relief effort by donating hay and/or money. Please contact Sam Quinney at squinney@scda.sc.gov or 803-413-4326 to coordinate hay donations.

To donate money, you make out a check to the SC Cattlemen's Foundation, Note: Texas Wildfire, and mail it to: SC Cattlemen's Foundation Attn: Texas Wildfire Assistance PO Box 207 Saluda, SC 29138

Of course, we've all seen another recent disaster and have learned its relationship to agriculture. The collapse of the Francis Scott Key Bridge in Baltimore was astonishing. The Port of Baltimore is relatively small compared to other East Coast ports, but it has outsized importance in the agribusiness world as the largest US port for handling farming and construction machinery. According to a report from Farm Progress, the port handled "a record 1.3 million tons of roll-on and roll-off farm and construction machinery in 2023. This includes tractors, combines, hay balers and more."

A lot of ag imports also move through the port, including sugar, coffee, and gypsum. Reports so far suggest that ag commerce won't be impeded significantly: Other ports will receive ships that were bound for Baltimore, and exports can be shifted around. We are likely to experience shipping delays, but as we've learned time and again, the US supply chain is strong and adaptable.

The bridge collapse is a good reminder of how globally linked we all are. Let's keep the families of those whose lives were lost in mind, as well as those working on recovery of this key component of trade. As we are prone to do in South Carolina, we are seeking ways to support our neighbors in Texas and across the world.

FEDERAL AND STATE VETERINARY, PUBLIC HEALTH AGENCIES SHARE UPDATE ON HPAI DETECTION IN KANSAS, TEXAS DAIRY HERDS

WILD MIGRATORY BIRDS BELIEVED TO BE SOURCE OF INFECTION; VIRAL TESTING AND EPIDEMIOLOGIC EFFORTS CONTINUE COMMERCIAL MILK SUPPLY REMAINS SAFE DUE TO BOTH FEDERAL ANIMAL HEALTH REQUIREMENTS AND PASTEURIZATION

BY USDA APHIS

WASHINGTON, March 25, 2024 – The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), as well as state veterinary and public health officials, are investigating an illness among primarily older dairy cows in Texas, Kansas, and New Mexico that is causing decreased lactation, low appetite, and other symptoms.

As of Monday, March 25, unpasteurized, clinical samples of milk from sick cattle collected from two dairy farms in Kansas and one in Texas, as well as an oropharyngeal swab from another dairy in Texas, have tested positive for highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI). Additional testing was initiated on Friday, March 22, and over the weekend because farms have also reported finding deceased wild birds on their properties. Based on findings from Texas, the detections appear to have been introduced by wild birds. Initial testing by the National Veterinary Services Laboratories has not found changes to the virus that would make it more transmissible to humans, which would indicate that the current risk to the public remains low.

Federal and state agencies are moving quickly to conduct additional testing for HPAI, as well as viral genome sequencing, so that we can better understand the situation, including characterization of the HPAI strain or strains associated with these detections.

At this stage, there is no concern about the safety of the commercial milk supply or that this circumstance poses a risk to consumer health. Dairies are required to send only milk from healthy animals into processing for human consumption; milk from impacted animals is being diverted or destroyed so that it does not enter the food supply. In addition, pasteurization has continually proven to inactivate bacteria and viruses, like influenza, in milk. Pasteurization is required for any milk entering interstate commerce.

Federal agencies are also working with state and industry partners to encourage farmers and veterinarians to report cattle illnesses quickly so that we can monitor potential additional cases and minimize the impact to farmers, consumers and other animals. For the dairies whose herds are exhibiting symptoms, on average about ten percent of each affected herd appears to be impacted, with little to no associated mortality reported among the animals. Milk loss resulting from symptomatic cattle to date is too limited to have a major impact on supply and there should be no impact on the price of milk or other dairy products.

This is a rapidly evolving situation, and USDA and federal and state partners will continue to share additional updates as soon as information becomes available. More information on biosecurity measures can be found at aphis.usda.gov/aphis/ourfocus/animalhealth/animal-disease-information/avian/avian-influenza/ai-wild-birds.

DHEC NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR PROJECTS AIMED AT REDUCING DIESEL EMISSIONS

REDUCED DIESEL EMISSIONS CAN LEAD TO IMPROVED AIR QUALITY

BY DHEC

The South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control (DHEC) announces the availability of grant funding aimed at reducing diesel emissions and improving air quality throughout the state. Diesel emissions make up a significant portion of the mobile-source air pollution in South Carolina, and less diesel emissions can lead to better air quality.

For federal fiscal year (FFY) 2023, DHEC has approximately $430,000 available for the replacement or upgrade of older diesel vehicles, engines, and equipment. The funds are provided through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Diesel Emissions Reduction Act (DERA) program.

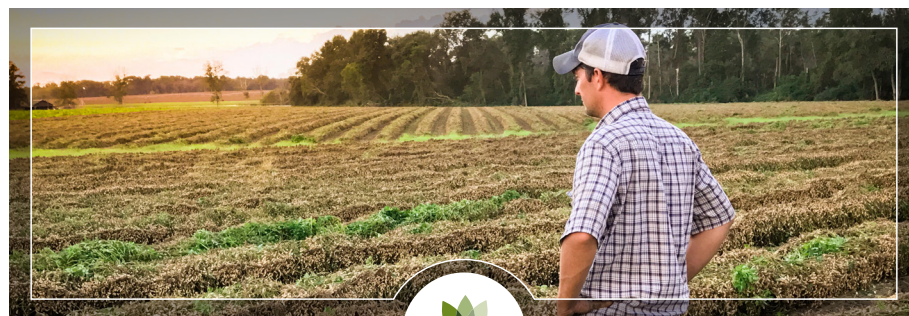

"Diesel engines last a long time, and many older-model diesel engines are still in use throughout our state," said Rhonda Thompson, Chief of DHEC's Bureau of Air Quality. "These older engines have significantly higher emissions than similar, newer engines. Projects funded through DERA grants will help reduce emissions and, in turn, provide benefits to both public health and the environment in South Carolina."

DERA funding is intended for county, city, or other local government entities, private businesses, colleges and universities, and non-profit organizations. Grants are awarded to eligible applicants for the implementation of diesel emissions reduction projects which will positively impact air quality and public health. Projects should be cost-effective, easily feasible, and reduce emissions through engine repowers, equipment and exhaust retrofits, or equipment replacements. EPA can share between 25% and 100% of eligible costs, depending on the type of project.

Previous DERA grant funding has been used to support a variety of different types of emissions-reduction projects statewide, including replacing concrete trucks, repowering a marine vessel, and retrofitting school buses. A complete list of past projects funded by DERA grants in South Carolina can be found on the DHEC DERA webpage.

The FFY2023 State DERA Request for Proposals, which contains detailed eligibility criteria and application instructions, is available at scdhec.gov/dera. Applications are due by Friday, April 26, 2024.

Please email dera@dhec.sc.gov with any questions related to the RFP or DERA grants in South Carolina.

NASDA ADOPTS POLICY IN SUPPORT OF FEDERAL PET FOOD LABEL AND OPPOSES PURR ACT

BY NASDA

ARLINGTON, Va. – The National Association of State Departments of Agriculture’s Board of Directors adopted new policy supporting the Food and Drug Administration’s Center for Veterinary Medicine to establish a national rule for pet food and specialty pet food labeling. The policy advocates for consistency and transparency on pet food and pet food labels to enable pet owners to make confident, informed decisions about what they feed their animals.

NASDA CEO Ted McKinney expounded on the organization’s choice to support the development of a federal pet food label and oppose the Pet Food Uniform Regulatory Reform Act.

“As it is currently written, the PURR Act establishes federal preemption of state regulations under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, which NASDA has long opposed. While the FDA has federal authority in the food safety network, states also oversee a complementary system of state laws and regulations to protect the food supply, including pet food. This integrated system is an effective and efficient regulatory process that safeguards pets and pet owners with state agriculture departments and feed programs serving as the first line of defense against pet food-borne illnesses.”

McKinney also said the PURR Act leaves additional concerns about the animal health implications specific to the bill’s labeling and marketing claims.

“The bill would allow pet food companies to make human food claims, including “ingredient sometimes present” language for certain ingredients on pet food labels,” McKinney said. “This could enable companies to either intentionally or unintentionally swap out certain ingredients, including potential pet allergens, that would not be found on the label.”

State feed programs are a resource for pet owners and small pet food companies, including those who only sell within their state and are navigating the complexities of labeling and marketing pet food.

“NASDA aims to maintain this critical resource for small pet food companies and pet owners seeking clarity and transparency in the regulatory process. To do this, state agriculture departments and state feed programs must retain the authority to investigate consumer complaints about products, and test and verify products to ensure that what is on the label matches package contents,” McKinney said.

NASDA supports modernizing and harmonizing pet food regulation that promotes uniformity from state to state, upholds critical protections for pet health and safety and maintains the critical role that state departments of agriculture and state feed programs play on the front lines in the oversight and regulation of pet products.

NASDA will continue to work with the Association of American Feed Control Officials, the pet food and animal feed industry, other trade associations, Congress, and the FDA Center for Veterinary Medicine to bring greater uniformity and efficiency to state feed control programs across the country while keeping feed and food safety, animal health and the role of state programs at the forefront.

NASDA is a nonpartisan, nonprofit association which represents the elected and appointed commissioners, secretaries and directors of the departments of agriculture in all 50 states and four U.S. territories. NASDA enhances American food and agricultural communities through policy, partnerships and public engagement. To learn more about NASDA, please visit nasda.org.

THE COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE: POSITIVELY IMPACTING PEOPLE AND ANIMALS ACROSS SOUTH CAROLINA

BY STACIA HARRIS, CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

There has never been a better time to establish a new College of Veterinary Medicine (CVM) in South Carolina. The human-animal bond is profound and unique, and with the changing face of animal agriculture, efforts to capture the new College’s mission and vision are more important than ever.

BUILDING THE CVM TEAM

The College of Veterinary Medicine plans to welcome its first class of veterinarians in 2026 upon receiving provisional accreditation. Dr. Steven Marks, the College’s founding dean, continues leading the team in hiring faculty and finalizing plans for state-of-the-art facilities and a rigorous curriculum.

“Our goals are to provide an exceptional student experience in a challenging, nurturing and values-driven environment to produce prepared veterinarians from Day One,” said Marks. “In the companion animal world, the human-animal bond has a very positive and important impact on the physical and mental health of their human families. In the large-animal and production animal world, there are still important impacts of the human-animal bond, but there are also important public health, food safety and economic impacts in the state.”

NEED FOR SOUTH CAROLINA VETERINARIANS

Clemson studied the need and found that a third of South Carolina counties have fewer than five veterinarians. Additionally, qualified candidates are applying to veterinary colleges, yet there needs to be more seats nationwide to accommodate students’ desire to become veterinarians.

According to Dr. Michael J. Neault, the South Carolina state veterinarian and Clemson’s director of Livestock-Poultry Health, there is a particular need for large-animal practitioners.

“Right now, agribusiness is the largest industry in the state, and that field needs veterinarians,” said Neault. “I’m excited about what’s going on at the College, and this is a great opportunity for the state of South Carolina to train and retain its veterinarians. This is a win-win for the field of veterinary medicine and the state.”

POSITIVELY IMPACTING PUBLIC HEALTH

Veterinarians are key to monitoring the animal population for a variety of illnesses. When animals are healthy, communities thrive.

“The training of veterinary clinicians and scientists can impact public health in many ways,” said Marks. “Public health can be impacted by promoting and protecting the human-animal bond but can also be related to food safety and infectious disease management.”

A VARIETY OF CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

There are many career opportunities within the field of veterinary medicine. Students can work in private practices treating large and small animals and pursue a focus on clinical and scientific work.

“Veterinary medicine is a popular career, and we hope that will bring more people to the state,” said Neault. “From there, we hope people will stay and practice in the state. The animal-human bond is extremely important. Animals are our pets and companions, and they are livestock as well. There is this drive to care for the animals in our lives, and Clemson’s College of Veterinary Medicine is a key piece of this equation.”

THE JOURNEY IS JUST BEGINNING

The College of Veterinary Medicine is uniquely positioned to support Clemson’s land-grant mission.

“The land-grant mission is to teach and educate, conduct research, and provide service to the community,” said Marks. “The College of Veterinary Medicine will contribute in each of these areas.”

Certified South Carolina Strawberry Farms

Strawberries are one of the earliest and most exciting spring agriculture products in South Carolina. Some farms are U-pick, while others sell their berries at roadside stands and local markets. Some farms may shift business models mid-season, inviting guests on the farm for U-pick only during the busiest times. In fact, some are not quite open yet for the year, but will be soon. It's best to track these farms on Facebook or Instagram and/or contact them before you visit.
